3 States Denied Relief and PWA As a Punishment

Georgia, Pennsylvania, Illinois Hit by Ickes, Hopkins.

Roosevelt Assailed By Gov. Talmadge

'Long Has Intellectual Halitosis,' Secretary Says of Huey.

By Felix Bruner.

"Crackdown" policies were put into action against entire States yesterday by both Secretary Ickes and Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins.

In a series of drastic steps, more extreme than any similar moves ever undertaken under the New Deal, the two men who have most to do with spending billions of relief money moved to force cooperation and to punish recalcitrant State administrations.

Secretary Ickes announced withdrawal of PWA grants from Georgia, and indicated that he intended permanently to cease "doing business" with that State.

"Not One Thin Dime."

He renewed a similar threat against Louisiana and announced that he was holding up money for new PWA projects there.

Hopkins declared that hereafter Pennsylvania "will not get one thin dime" of relief money unless it puts up $5,000,000 a month for its own relief. The Legislature thus far has refused to appropriate such a large sum.

He announced that he was "not preparing to give Illinois any more money at any time" unless it supplies $3,000,000 a month from State funds.

Both States are facing the imminent necessity of completely abandoning relief unless they meet Hopkins' demands, which Legislatures have indicated they consider excessive.

Roosevelt Called Radical.

The most drastic move was that taken against Georgia, and it followed closely upon a statement by Gov. Talmadge that President Roosevelt is a radical and that there would be a third party next year.

Ickes announced that four PWA allotments amounting to $210,000 had been rescinded in Georgia. He said there would be no more grants or loans to the State, but that the Government would continue to deal with Georgia municipalities.

Ickes declared he had acted because Gov. Talmadge had failed to keep a promise to support legislation validating bonds taken by PWA as security for loans to the State. He said the Legislature had passed the validating bill and that Talmadge had vetoed it after promising to sign it. He said he could not even obtain an explanation from the Governor in spite of repeated letters and telegrams.

"I don't know how to do business with a man like that, so I have quit trying," Ickes said.

Asked whether his attitude would

Industry Index Again Records Marked Gains

Upturn in Durable Goods Is Attended by Increase in Employment.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

For the fourth consecutive month, the Department of Labor yesterday announced an increase in industrial activity. The department's index of industrial employment and pay rolls showed conditions last month reached the highest level since the depression low point in March two years ago.

Improvement was noted particularly in the durable goods industries. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins remarked that she considered "significant" the index showing that employment in the heavy goods industries was 2.2 per cent greater in March than in the preceding month, and that pay rolls for this group were up 3.6 per cent.

It was the third successive month the durable goods industries had displayed an advance, after months of lagging behind the procession. The March index showed that employment in all industries was 82.4 per cent of the 1923-1925 average, while pay rolls were 70.8 per cent. These figures compare with 81.3 and 69.1 for February, this year, and 80.8 and 64.8 for March of 1934.

"The increase of 2.1 per cent in the durable goods group brings the index for this group to 70.8 (on the 1923-1925 base)," Miss Perkins remarked, "indicating that approximately 71 out of every 100 workers employed in this group in 1923-1925 were employed in March.

"In the nondurable goods group the gain of 0.7 per cent in employ-

The Solution

To the Radio Thriller, 'What Would You Do?'

The solution of the fourth thrilling "What Would You Do?" real life drama broadcast Wednesday at 5:30 p. m. from WJEJ, Hagerstown, Md., follows:

James Cronin, the new president of the bank, asked John Foster to sit down.

"Speaking for the board of directors, Foster, I want you to know that we are all very sorry that Norman Montague used your name for his falsifications. However, I've called you in to tell you that the bank has cleared you entirely of any blame."

"But—but——" John's tongue refused to speak.

"I know all this has been a shock, but now that you're free——"

"I'll never be free, Mr. Cronin. I've got to tell you the truth. I took money—$1,800. I didn't know anything about Montague. Here it is. In this envelope. It's burnt my fingers, my conscience, my soul, all these years. I—I——" he couldn't go on.

The president was quiet for a long time. Finally he spoke. "I'm gravely disappointed in you, Foster. But at least you've come out like a man and confessed. Further, you've returned what you—misused. I think you've learned your lesson."

"Oh, I have, I have." Foster's voice carried deep conviction.

"Then for the good of everybody concerned, I think you had better resign from the bank—and start over—some place else."

John and his wife live up in Massachusetts now. John has a small woolen mill. He is known for his generosity to all forms of charity. There is no man in the community more highly respected.

Newspaper Advertising Gains 5,000,000 Lines

Chicago, April 18 (AP).—Total newspaper advertising stood 5,000,000 lines higher in March, 1935, than in March, 1934, Advertising Age said today, after a survey conducted in 80 cities.

Classified advertising was the leading classification from the standpoint of increased volume, gaining more than 10 per cent.

Another Thrust Is Taken at Pacifism by Session.

Mrs. William A. Becker, of New Jersey was elected president general of the D. A. R. by a vote of 1,436 to 819 for Dr. Flora Myers Gillentine, of Tennessee.

The Daughters of the American Revolution went to the polls in their Memorial Continental Hall yesterday to decide whether their leader for the next three years shall be a Tennessee psychology professor or a New Jersey society woman.

Resolutions, addresses, reports and music had their place on the fourth-day program of the D. A. R. congress, but chief interest centered throughout on the 15 voting booths in which 2,065 delegates cast their ballots for either Mrs. William A. Becker, of New Jersey, or Mrs. Flora Myers Gillentine, of Tennessee.

Balloting opened at 8 a. m. and closed at 3 p. m. To 40 tellers was entrusted the formidable task of counting the votes, upon which hinged not only the election of a successor to Mrs. Russell William Magna but also seven vice presidents general and a national board of management.

Officials declared it would be many hours before the results were announced and that the tabulation might take all night.

Thrust at Pacifism.

The society took another thrust at pacifism yesterday, adopting a resolution which calls upon its State organizations to deny loan funds to students "who pledge themselves never to defend their country or who unite with organizations whose purpose it is to destroy the national defense of the United States."

Its past resolutions in behalf of legislation making it a crime to advocate overthrow of the United States Government by force or violence also were reaffirmed.

Other resolutions which were adopted authorized the dispatching of congratulations to the Boy Scouts of America on the occasion of their twenty-fifth anniversary and expressed appreciation of Attorney General Cummings' address to the congress last Monday night.

The "Red Network" was injected into yesterday's proceedings, indirectly, when Mrs. William Louis Dunne reported on the activities of the D. A. R. publicity committee, of which she is national chairman.

"The suppression of the activities of individuals who have a flair for activities which may be sentimental is the sole antidote for unfavorable publicity," said Mrs. Dunne, who is also historian general and an ardent worker for the election of Mrs. Gillentine.

She admitted later that the reference was to Mrs. Becker's indorsement last fall of the "Red Network," a guidebook of American radicalism, which lists the name of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Never before has there been a year of such progress in the work for fine, clean films as in 1934 and 1935," said the report prepared by Mrs. Mildred Lewis Russell, chairman of the better films committee. It was delivered by Mrs. William Harrison Hightower, of Thomaston, Ga.

Mrs. Hightower was among the prize winners in a subscription contest conducted by the committee last summer, the report said. Her reward was the pair of blue kid gloves worn by Joan Crawford in "Sadie McKee." Other winners were favored with Shirley Temple's dancing slippers, a Czechoslovakian bottle which came from Mary Pickford's dressing table and a Russian mirror in which Marlene Dietrich admired herself in "The Scarlet Empress."

Mrs. George Madden Grimes, State regent for the District of Columbia, reported that the local D. A. R. organization was active in almost two score different fields during the past year. More than $2,000 was contributed to the Constitution Hall fund, 2,425 citizenship manuals were distributed and prizes were

NRA Averts U.S. Ruin, Johnson Says; Experts Call It Just a Mistake

Underwood & Underwood.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson pictured yesterday at the Senate NRA investigation. Beside him is his son, Lieut. Kilbourne Johnston.

Revision, Not Abolition, Described as Need by Former Head.

Pleading for the life of the national industrial recovery act, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson yesterday told the Senate Finance Committee that NRA is a middle course between communism and fascism.

A huge crowd that filled the big Senate caucus room failed to witness the expected fireworks as the first NRA administrator made his long-awaited appearance in behalf of the Blue Eagle.

Instead, they heard for three hours the calm, serious words of an earnest pleader, almost begging for a chance for the law which he believes will save the country from disaster.

Beside Johnson, as he read an 88-page statement, sat his son, Lieut. Kilbourne Johnston, and Gen. Johnson's secretary, Miss Frances Robinson. The room was filled with NRA officials, but the new head of the NRA, Donald R. Richberg, whom Johnson frequently has attacked, was not present.

Step by step, Johnson outlined his ideas of the NRA, frankly admitting that mistakes had been made in its administration while he was its head, but insisting this was not the fault of the law. Only occasionally was what Father Coughlin has described as his "underslung vocabulary" heard. Senators smiled when he changed a sentence in his manuscript referring to "the guts of our trouble" to "the essence of our trouble."

Much of Johnson's testimony was directed toward breaking down the frequently heard charge that NRA is operating against the interest of small business. The "free economic system" had long since ceased to exist, he said.

He declared that statistics disclose "a slow and implacable disintegration of the profit system and especially of unregulated and uncontrolled operation thereof, as a reliable plan for keeping our people employed."

"I freely admit the faults and errors of the NRA," he said, "and will fight as hard as anybody to correct

Serious Recovery Snag, Declare Brookings Economists.

The NRA has substantially retarded recovery, in the opinion of a group of Brookings Institution experts who made public yesterday the first independent report on operation of the national industrial recovery act since the law was passed.

Among the signers of the report, which is extremely critical of the whole theory of NRA, is Leon C. Marshall, a member of the recovery board itself. A number of the other signers have been connected with the NRA.

The others are Leverett S. Lyon, economist and former dean of the school of commerce and finance of Washington University and former assistant NRA administrator; Lewis L. Lorwin, who was loaned to the National Resources Board by the Brookings Institution and who was recently appointed to the staff of the International Labor Office in Geneva; Charles L. Dearing, who was loaned to NRA as a motor code administrator; Charles Terporgh, former professor of economics at Antioch and now on the staff of the Federal Reserve Board, and Paul T. Homan, former Cornell economist.

In its conclusion, following a long and detailed report, the Brookings group found that even after wages had been raised by the codes, the gain, when averaged out over all employes in the country, proved to be about the same as the increase in the cost of living attributable to the program.

The NRA, the report said, has vastly increased the power of industrial groups. Trade parctices provisions were described as a hinndrance rather than a stimulus to recovery.

Added jobs as a result of NRA were estimated at 1,750,000, but it was declared this was accomplished by spreading work rather than increasing the total amount of work.

"It is our view," the group said, "that the NRA has had the effect

The 1,500 works of art that make up the exhibit—oil paintings, sculpture, water colors, pen and ink sketches and etchings—will be shown in nine Washington department stores.

Mrs. Roosevelt's itinerary has not been arranged definitely, so that it is not known which store she will visit first, or in what order she will visit them. She will not be able to visit them all Monday, since her time will be limited. However, she does hope to visit them all in the course of the exhibit.

The complete list of patrons for the exhibit, which represents a mutually advantageous coalition of merchants and artists, was made public yesterday. It follows:

President Will Welcome Byrd Home From Antarctic May 10

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and his Antarctic explorers will land at Washington May 10 and will be received officially by President Roosevelt and other Government officials, it was learned yesterday.

The White House disclosed yesterday that the President had radioed the admiral as he neared the Panama Canal on March 28, congratulating him on his achievements and expressing the desire to greet him on his return after a two-year absence.

Under present plans, the Byrd expedition will cruise up the Potomac aboard the historic revenue cutter Bear, and dock at the Navy Yard. There the President will go aboard the Bear to see the admiral and his party.

Shortly thereafter, Mr. Roosevelt plans to board the presidential yacht Sequoia and receive Admiral Byrd and his companions at an informal reception. The President then is expected to depart for a week-end cruise on the Potomac.

On various occasions the President has sent encouraging messages to the Byrd Expedtion in Little America.

District officials are considering plans for an official welcome to Washington for Admiral Byrd, but nothing has been definitely decided. However, the National Geographic Society will hold a reception for the admiral and members of his party the night of his arrival in Washington.

The reception will be held at Constitution Hall and Admiral Byrd will be welcomed by both the officers and the trustees of the society. Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the society, will introduce Admiral Byrd, who will respond in a brief address. Members of the party who will be on the stage will be presented.

House Routs Radical Bills For Security

All Opposition Plans Rejected by Overwhelming Vote.

Doughton Measure Sped for Passage Today Amid Cheers.

Cries of "Stop the steamroller!" were ignored yesterday as the House brushed aside all radical amendments to the Administration's social security bill.

Amendments killed by a surprisingly overwhelming vote ranged from the Townsend $50-$200-a-month old-age pension scheme to the Lundeen $10-a-week unemployment gratuity plan, which would have cost billions of dollars.

Jubilant over their success in knocking down all opposition amendments, the New Deal floor command prepared to push the bill to passage today.

The sweetest victory of all to the Democrats was the crushing defeat administered to a proposal by Representative Treadway (Republican), Massachusetts, arch enemy of the Doughton measure, which would have increased the Federal old-age pension benefit from $15 to $20 a month.

Treadway Routed, 144 to 80.

Even the majority leaders were stunned when a teller's count showed the one-sided vote of 144 to 80 against the Treadway amendment.

"There is but one purpose for this amendment," exploded Representative Cooper (Democrat), Tennessee. "It is to disrupt this entire bill."

Window-rattling cheers from the Democratic side of the aisle followed announcement of the decisive vote by Representative Sam D. McReynolds, chairman of the Committee of the whole.

The vote was the answer of the huge Democratic majority to the claim of Treadway that $15 a month by Uncle Sam plus an equal contribution from the State was "not enough" to support the needy aged in a "decent manner."

Monaghan Howled Down.

The first amendment howled down, 206 to 56, was that of leather-lunged Representative Monaghan (Democrat), Montana, which would have required a 2 per cent transaction tax to finance pensions for all persons over 60, beginning at $50 and increasing to $200 a month within five years.

Strangely enough, elderly Representative Taylor, Colorado, acting majority leader, was among those who voted for the Townsend plan.

Another important suggested change which crumbled before the majority's well-oiled machine was that of Representative Isabelle Greenway (Democrat), Arizona, and Scrugham (Democrat), Nevada, which would have fixed Uncle Sam's donation to the aged at $20 and the State's contribution at $10.

Perhaps the most scalding debate of all flared when Representative Knutson (Republican), Minnesota, sought to have the Federal Government pay $60 a month to the aged.

"This whole bill," he shouted, "is un-American and unfair, but what are you going to do when they have a steam-roller in this House. They talk one way and vote another. This bill is merely a shot in the arm, and hardly even that."

Doughton Ridicules Plan.

When "Fighting Bob" Doughton, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who introduced the bill, ridiculed the Knutson amendment as impractical and likely to cost a cool billion dollars a year, the House roared its disapproval. A tellers' vote was not demanded.

Two Mississippi Democrats—Colmer and Ford—sought to lighten the burden of the States, but were snowed under. Colmer asked that four-fifths of the $15 a month be paid by the Federal Government, while Ford proposed that $14.85 be taken from the Federal Treasury and 15 cents from the State money bags.

The Mississippians were out-voted without a formal count after two-fisted Representative Sam Hill (Democrat), Washington, one of the ranking members of the Ways and Means Committee, described their proposal as "simply a subterfuge to

Reich Tells Italy, Britain of Anger At League Action

Von Buelow Gives View on Geneva Action in Talks to Envoys.

Hitler to Answer League Tomorrow

Holds Parleys Preparing Vigorous Response to Condemnation.

By the United Press.

Berlin, April 18.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, completely ignoring France officially, has struck back at her through Britain and Italy for sponsoring the League of Nation's condemnation of his arms plans.

On receipt of the word from Geneva that the league council unanimously had adopted the French resolution against the Reich's military program, Der Fuehrer instructed the foreign ministry to express the government's strong indignation.

Dr. Bernhard von Buelow, undersecretary for foreign affairs, received the British ambassador, Sir Eric Phipps, and told him in plain language what Hitler and the government in general felt about Geneva's action. The incident yesterday was revealed today.

Dr. Von Buelow hinted the result might lead Germany to decline to co-operate in a series of international agreements for security and peace, now under negotiation. The communication was made orally when Sir Eric visited the foreign ministry.

No Formal Note.

No formal note was delivered either to him or the Italian envoy, despite published reports abroad. The report was denied by the British and German authorities.

Britain regards Germany's retort to the league's condemnation as strictly informal.

Hitler meanwhile conferred with party and government leaders at Munich, preparing an answer to Geneva, to be delivered Saturday, on his forty-sixth birthday celebration, which will be a national holiday.

He summoned Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath and Joachim von Ribbentrop, his personal diplomatic envoy, and other leading figures in the foreign office to the impromptu parley, to aid in formulating a characteristically vigorous reply.

The reply may be a proclamation by Hitler; it may be a statement in the name of the government. Contents of the declaration are known only to Hitler. It was assumed the document would bear out Von Buelow's remarks to the British and Italian ambassadors, emphasizing the difficulty of further German cooperation in pending European negotiations because of the Geneva reproof.

The document also may stress the increasing difficulties attending German return to the league.

Context Veiled.

Another complication in the Reich's foreign relations in line with the Geneva trend occurred when the British ambassador gave the government the text of the Anglo-Italian declaration embodied in the Stresa communique, reaffirming England's commitments under the Locarno Treaty.

The communication calls for no reply, although its delivery to Berlin probably was intended to hint that German violation of the demilitarization of the Rhineland zone would not be tolerated.

Plans for a new Pan-German

KING BORIS.

Sofia Banishes Political Foes; Ministry Quits

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Sofia, Bulgaria, April 18.—A feverish day of arrests, cabinet resignations and incipient disorders was climaxed tonight as Premer Petko Zlateff's entire government resigned and King Boris immediately commissioned Zlateff to continue until another cabinet can be formed.

While the capital still buzzed with comment over the cabinet crisis, reports arrived from the provinces indicating violent reaction to the summary arrest and interment of outstanding opposition leaders, among them former Premiers Kimon Gueorgieff and Alexander Zankoff.

A great crowd of Zankoff's adherents gathered at the railway station at Plovdiv to cheer him as he passed through en route to tiny St. Anastasia Island in the Black Sea, where he and four others seized today will be interned.

Gendarmes, reinforced by cavalry, were called out to disperse the throng with swords and bayonets.

Zlateff, raised to power in King Boris' "royal putsch" last January, submitted the government's collective resignation to the monarch after three of his ministers deserted him in protest against the arrests.

Receiving the press, the premier explained that Gueorgieff, Zankoff and the others were taken into custody in the lightning-like round-up because of their subversive activities.

Secret conferences have been held at Zankoff's home recently, he said, in which active army officers as well as reserve officers have participated. Arrest of the leaders was, therefore, ordered, he added, and three members of the cabinet who disagreed with the premier promptly resigned.

As to his possible successor, the veteran army man said, "That rests entirely with the king."

King Boris this evening conferred with Minister of the Interior Krum Koleff and Gen. Todod Radeff, minister of education. Both of them were mentioned as possibilities for the premiership.

3-Year-Old Collegian Rivals His Untutored Twin in Rioting

By the United Press.

New York, April 18.—In case you've ever wanted a first-hand observation on the advantages of college training, you should have been at the hectic third birthday party today of the experimentally brought-up Woods twins, Johnny and Jimmy.

A suit of armor would have been the best observer's costume.

For the young men, sheepskins and cum laude to the contrary notwithstanding, ran riotously amok, as the saying goes, with regard to the education, conditioning, streamlining, free-wheeling and such, to which one of them was scientifically exposed for two years while his young brother was pretty well on his own.

Take Johnny, now, for instance. He demonstrated his precocity by biting a visitor on the leg, gulping the candles off his cake, throwing a photographer's hat out the window and, in general, forgetting all the things he learned at college.

Jimmy, who never had to climb ladders at the Normal Child Development Clinic, Neurological Institute, Columbia-Presbytreian Medical Institute, but just grew up as other kids do, lent Johnny a helping hand in finally routing their weary and harassed callers.

Without benefit of scientific upbringing, James did his share to add to the confusion by getting cake all over his new blue suit, throwing pieces of cake all around the apartment, knocking all the new toys over and finally getting tired and bursting into tears.

Asylum Ward Killed in Leap

Rescuers Plead in Vain With Fugitive From Illinois Hospital.

By the Associated Press.

Elgin, Ill., April 18.—Kenneth Ortt, 20, escaped from Elgin State Hospital for the Insane today and a few hours later, rather than be captured, plunged to his death from a 150-foot water tower as firemen rushed toward him with a net.

Ortt, a Chicago shipping clerk, was committed a week ago. Eluding guards, he dashed to the banks of the Fox River and there spotted the water tower of the Kerber Packing Co. Company employes saw him scramble to the top and called police when he horrified them by hanging from the tower railing by his hands.

As the police arrived and started up the ladder, Ortt shouted:

"If you come up that ladder, I'll jump."

The police stopped and tried to coax Ortt down.

Meanwhile, other company employes called the fire department. Ortt saw the firemen presently and shouted:

"Here I come!"

He leaped as fireman rushed forward with a net—too late.

In Ortt's pocket was a letter to his mother telling her he intended to kill himself.

U. S. Chamber Favors Friend Of Roosevelt

Harper Sibley Is Reported in Line for Presidency, Succeeding Harriman.

By the Associated Press.

A personal friend of President Roosevelt, but an opponent of many of his policies, was reported last night by informed observers to be first in line for the presidency of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

He is Harper Sibley, banker and farmer of Rochester, N. Y., put forward as the prospective successor of Henry I. Harriman. He attended both Groton and Harvard, a part of the time while Mr. Roosevelt, himself, was a student in those schools. Sibley's friends said, however, that he made no secret of his dislike for some major Administration moves.

Associates said that in a general way Sibley might be expected to follow the middle-of-the-road policy adopted by Harriman, but that he was likely to be more critical of some Administration theories. Increasing opposition to some New Deal ideas apparently has been developing in the chamber.

The chamber's next convention is to be held in Washington April 29 to May 2. The new president will be chosen during that period.

The chamber's program for this year contains many speakers known to be critical of Roosevelt policies; but observers said no open break with the President was likely, and in several particulars he probably would be supported.

Sibley, friends said, farms on a large scale and has substantial holdings in Illinois. In addition, he is heavily interested in coal mines and lumber.

He is reported to be highly critical of some AAA policies and to be vigorously opposed to Government intrusion in business.

Paroled Prisoner Kills Ohio Deputy

By the Associated Press.

Van Wert, Ohio, April 18.—A deputy sheriff was shot and killed and a Mansfield (Ohio) Reformatory parole officer was injured in a short but furious battle with a paroled convict late today. Forrest Good, 40, and father of two children, was slain as he grappled with Roy Smith, 34, on a farm 18 miles west of here near the Ohio-Indiana line. Coroner W. E. Bach said tonight that Smith would be charged with first-degree murder.

C. T. Evans, of Mansfield, is in the Van Wert County Hospital. Physicians said it would be necessary to amputate two of his fingers, injured in the fight. He was not shot.

Earlier today Good had arrested a brother of Roy for questioning in connection with the theft of wheat, the sheriff said. The deputies decided to visit Roy and ask him if he knew anything about the theft. Smith refused to enter the official automobile, the sheriff said, and a struggle ensued in which Smith drew a pistol and shot Good.

Race Watcher Crashes.

Derby, Conn., April 18 (AP).—A college boy flier, so absorbed in watching the Yale crew practice that his plane hit a cable and plunged into the Housatonic River, was saved late today by the quick headwork of Yale's head-crew coach, Ed Leader. The flier, John Sherman, 25, of Cleveland, Ohio, a law student at Yale, was fished from the river by Coach Leader, who sped to the sinking plane in a launch.

Action on Tariff Oversight; the Powerful Townsendites; Pull Pushes Buttons.

By Raymond Clapper

Correction of the oversight in the Hawley-Smoot tariff act, pointed out here a few days ago as one of the factors responsible for the influx of Japanese bleached cotton goods, is the object of an amendment offered in the House by Representative Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking minority member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Representative Casey, of Massachusetts, also has a similar amendment. In revising the tariff under the Hoover Administration, the minimum specific duty on bleached cotton goods was inadvertently omitted. The result is that Japanese bleached goods come in under an advalorem duty averaging 8.7 cents a pound. If the minimum specific duty had been retained and scaled up as it was on unbleached, it would have put a rate of 24 cents a pound on these goods, in addition to the compensating tax. Japanese imports are almost entirely bleached goods.

The charge made this week by Administrator Chester Davis that utilities have joined in the fight against the AAA amendments is based on the fact that some protests against this legislation have been traced back to a utilities man in Fort Dodge, Iowa.

For a year Townsend-plan organizers have been going about the country collecting signatures to petitions. Millions were rounded up. They came to the White House and to the House and Senate in truckloads. Washington would be forced to action.

Action finally came yesterday. The Townsend amendment, eased to make it more acceptable, was offered as an amendment to the Administration's social security bill. Out of 262 votes cast, the mighty hordes of Townsendites were able to command only 56.

• • • •

When the President pushes a button in the White House to open a world's fair, to inaugurate the kraut packing season, or as happened a few nights ago, to open the Industrial Arts Exposition in New York, few persons not directly connected with the event have any idea of the backstage work connected with such an apparently simple phase of presidential duties.

The actual job of "pressing the button" is merely this:

All rooms in the White House and the executive offices which are used by the President have telegraph wire outlets. At the appointed hour for the ceremony, the President may be in his office, in the Cabinet room, in the upper oval room or the lower oval room, but wherever he is, "Doc" Smithers, White House wire chief, arrives with the solid gold telegraph sending key, plugs it in, and at the proper instant, signals the President to close the key.

This key is made of gold. It is studded with 22 gold nuggets, the first taken out of the Klondike by the discoverer, who sent the key as a gift to President Taft for the opening of the Alaska-Yukon Exposition in 1909. Shortly thereafter Taft gave the key to Smithers who has used it for presidential ceremonies ever since. No one except Presidents and their wives have been permitted to operate it. The key contains $500 worth of gold at present value but because of its sentimental value Smithers often has been offered many times that amount for it. Except that it is gold, the key is exactly like the ordinary telegraph sending instrument.

However, the real work comes before the button pressing stage is reached. One of these presidential stunts may represent months of wire pulling. Senators, Representatives, Governors, any friend of a friend of someone high in the Administration may have been persuaded to use his good offices in obtaining the President's acquiesence. Or possibly one of the White House secretaries, Marvin McIntyre or Stephen T. Early, may have put in a word with the President. Often that is sufficient.

An outsider never knows what circumstance may have tipped the scales. Once Woodrow Wilson, who was hard-hearted about such matters, appeared with a word of greeting at a convention here solely because his White House secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty, had aroused his sympathy with a hard-luck story.

Three men had promised their business associates that they would come to Washington and line up the President to open their convention.

They arrived at the White House dressed like Tammany aldermen at a funeral, their pockets bulging with Corona-Coronas. They lived at the best hotel. But nothing happened. They came back week after week.

Finally a few days before the convention they obtained an appointment with Tumulty. They were a sorry-looking crew, reduced to cheap cigars, eating at lunch counters and living in a boarding house. Their money was gone and they were through unless the President opened their convention.

Tumulty made a tearful plea to the President, who consented to see the three bedraggled musketeers. After looking them over he concluded Tumulty's sympathy was justified and agreed to do the convention opening.

On the strength of that the three musketeers lived happily and prosperously ever after as Washington contact men.

Administration Bank Act Voted Intact on 'Hill'

House Committee Agrees to Report Liberal Bill Out as a Whole.

By the United Press.

The Administration won a victory last night on the proposed banking act of 1935 when the House Banking and Currency Committee agreed to report it as a whole, leaving intact the advanced views of liberal New Dealers.

The measure will be reported formally out of committee today and a rule will be sought to prevent it from being used as a target for inflationists and other proponents of drastic panaceas.

Chairman Henry B. Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, of the committee, described the bill as "the most constructive step that has been taken since the adoption of the Federal reserve act to adapt the banking system of our country to the needs of modern industry, agriculture and business."

Provisions of Measure.

In its present form the measure would:

1. Make permanent the deposit insurance plan.

2. Give 7,500 banks now insured under the plan the privilege of not joining the Federal Reserve system by July 1, 1937, as they would have been compelled to do under the present law.

3. Grant the Federal Reserve Board full powers to pass upon the qualifications of governors of Federal Reserve banks.

4. Set up a committee of five Reserve governors to advise the Reserve Board on open-market operations.

5. Authorize the Reserve Board to utilize its monetary and credit powers to promote conditions conducive to business stability and to "mitigate unstabilizing fluctuations in the general level of production, trade, prices and employment."

6. Liberalize provisions regarding real estate loans by national banks by eliminating all restrictions except that the amount of any such loan hereafter shall not exceed 60 per cent of the value of real estate.

To Prevent Collapse.

Steagall said the proposed amendments should place Federal Reserve banks in a position to anticipate and prevent the collapse of solvent banking institutions.

"Heretofore they have not always been able to obtain necessary accommodation: to meet emergency demands upon them," he explained.

The House committee acted in accordance with President Roosevelt's wishes, but in doing so raised the flag for another bitter struggle between Steagall and Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, of the banking sub-committee which must pass on the measure in the upper chamber.

Glass is determined to separate the bill. He will open committee hearings today.

Aside from attending a meeting of directors of the New York Life Insurance Co., Hoover confined his activities in the East to "friendly visits," Paul Sexson, his secretary, said. Reports connecting the trip with Republican Party political plans were met by Sexson with the statement there would be "no comment." Mr. Hoover, the secretary added, is "not writing any books, not making any statements • • • not planning any trips."

Veterans Grave Vandals Steal Bronze Markers, Senators Hear

Cemetery Racketeering Is Charged in Senate Group Hearing.

Bronze grave markers are being stolen from the last resting places of soldiers and sailors in cemeteries throughout the country, it was testified yesterday before a Senate committee.

The testimony was offered at a hearing of the Military Affairs subcommittee considering a bill to permit the War Department to supply bronze markers for veterans' graves instead of stone markers required at present.

Roswell M. Austin, secretary of the Memorial Extension Commission, declared any increase in the use of bronze markers would encourage the thefts now vexing many cemetery authorities. He introduced newspaper clippings to support his charges. An American Legion post was quoted as reporting that nearly half the bronze markers on war graves in Bridgeport, Conn., were missing, and at Braddock, Pa., 640 metal name plates had been removed.

Austin charged that chief supporters of the bill were promoters of "no monument" cemeteries, requiring that all grave stones be flat and nearly level with the ground. He said lot owners in some such cemeteries had been charged $20 or more for installation of cement foundations for the markers when $5 or $6 would have been a fair price.

Others who appeared against the bill included two cemetery superintendents, Peter L. Scholl, Reading, Pa., past president of the National Association of Cemetery Associations, and Oscar F. Burbank, Worcester, Mass., past president of the New England Cemetery Association.

Scholl testified that bronze plates corrode and work loose from their foundations. Burbank said markers in the cemetery of which he is superintendent have become so loose that very slight pressure is required to lift them off.

Boy and Kite Blamed For Lights' Failure

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 18. Some boy with a kite on which he was using a wire instead of a string was blamed today for the failure of North Martinsburg to have lights the last few nights.

Approximately 80 lights were burned out.

Power company officials think the youth was flying a kite with a thin wire instead of a thread, and that this wire formed a contact between two wires of the power lines, one of them a high-tension wire, causing the burnout. The company said it was put to considerable expense and labor to repair the damage.

If a wire string is being used instead of cord, there is a hazard of electrocution, the power men said.

Farmers Fight Dust Program In Five States

'Listing' Held Ridiculous; New Storm Darkens Roy, N. Mex.

By the Associated Press.

Kingman, Kans., April 18.—New rumblings of opposition to a proposed five-State listing program intended to break up dust storms were reported today among western Kansas farmers.

The extent of the opposition, wholly unorganized, remained undetermined. Some opposition flared at recent meetings of farmers at Hays and Stockton. In addition, Wallace E. Emmons, Kingman newspaperman, returned from a tour with the report most of the farmers with whom he talked ridiculed the program.

Experts Approve Plan.

The proposed program, already being pushed in Kansas by Gov. Alf M. Landon and others, was approve yesterday at Garden City by soil erosion experts of Colorado, Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas and New Mexico.

Under the plan the Government would provide gasoline and oil for the throwing up of furrows by lister plows. These furrows would run cross-wise to prevailing winds. The theory is that the blowing dust, cutting across fields under strong winds, would drop into the listed furrows.

Proponents look upon the program as a temporary one to preface such more permanent measures as a tree shelter belt and the sowing of grass crops.

Rains, passing up the area where they are needed most, fell on eastern Kansas and most of Missouri. A. D. Robb, Federal meteorologist at Topeka, Kans., said the western Kansas situation is becoming "desperate."

Soil Held Undamaged.

At Wichita, Kans., however, Charles Erb, a chemist, after a careful examination of the blowing soil, said he was convinced the southwestern storms have not damaged the fertility of fields to any extent. He said he found most of the wind-tossed silt to be of a sandy, unproductive nature.

A dust storm which closed schools at Roy, N. Mex., turned daylight into darkness and paralyzed traffic, was the most severe reported out of the affected zone today. It began there late yesterday. Less serious disturbances were reported in southeastern Colorado and western Kansas.

Mrs. Sinclair made the statement while her husband was in a hospital here undergoing a general physical examination. She said he was not ill, but was submitting to a thorough check-up.

Braught had been overseeing relief since last summer in Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Nebraska and Kansas.

Details Waited To Supply Jobs To 11,000 Here

D. C. Officials Mark Time Until Roosevelt States Plans.

District officials yesterday marked time while they awaited action by President Roosevelt setting in motion the new work-relief machinery to be financed by the $4,880,000,000 unemployment relief act.

The broad general plan for the District which has been worked out by Commissioner George E. Allen and District welfare and relief executives is of a character which will permit immediate changes to conform to the Federal regulations.

Commissioner Allen said he could give no estimates of the cost of the plan in the District. The cost would depend on the number and character of projects found within the scope of the Federal regulations.

The Commissioner estimated that the tentative program already prepared would provide jobs for 11,000 persons over a period of months. He reiterated his statement that wages on the relief-work projects should be somewhat under the commercial standard. The District certainly would observe all wage laws.

Amelia Starts Hop Today.

Mexico, April 18 (AP).—The foreign office announced tonight Amelia Earhart Putnam would take off from Los Angeles at about 11 p. m. tomorrow for a nonstop flight to this city. Flying mostly at night, Miss Earhart expects to make the trip in approximately 12 hours. After resting here for a few days she plans to fly, nonstop, to New York.

Long Bills Sped By Legislature In Record Time

22 Measures Approved in 35 Minutes by State Senate Group.

By the Associated Press.

Baton Rouge, La., April 18.—The Louisiana Legislature pushed Senator Huey P. Long's bills toward final passage today in the face of threats from Washington to withhold Federal funds from the State.

Senator Long, declared by Secretary Ickes today to be suffering from "halitosis of the intellect," prepared to return to Washington to answer the Interior Secretary. The latter announced in Washington he was holding up approval of several Louisiana public works projects because of Long's proposed unfavorable legislation.

Asked how soon he would cancel Louisiana PWA projects, Ickes said, "Just be patient."

He had declared previously that Federal funds would not be used to build up Long's political machine.

Bills Rushed Through.

The Senate Finance Committee today quickly approved Long's bills designed to place supervision of the Federal expenditures under State board, block New Orleans refinancing in Federal Court and compel the appointment of elections officials to serve at the polls by local boards ruled by the Governor.

All opposition was swept aside as both houses went through their routine today in the midstages of enacting into law bills which have brought the fresh outbreak in Long's war with the Roosevelt Administration.

Long told the Senate Finance Committee his election bill provided a "non-partisan" plan and declared that another bill requiring State consent for city refinancing in Federal court was aimed at New Orleans, where Federal Judge Wayne G. Borah already has approved a refinancing plan involving more than $8,000,000.

Speed Record Set.

The city government is headed by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, Long's political enemy, who went into Federal court at the time the attorney general was seeking to get an accounting of the city's transactions in State courts. The State court suit was blocked by the application to Federal court under congressional act.

Setting a new record for speed, the committee approved 22 bills in a session of only 35 minutes, and returned their report.

The only opposition at the hearing came from Senator W. Scott Hayward, anti-administrationist.

Long told the committee the bill giving the State administration control of the election machinery was designed to prevent the use of "dummy" candidates who draw election officers for their side and then desert the race.

Calls Board Non-Partisan.

The new law would give the parish boards of election supervisors, controlled by gubernatorial appointment, authority to appoint five commissioners and five alternate commissioners to conduct the election and count the vote at each polling booth.

Under the present law each candidate submits names for a drawing of commissioners, thus giving each side representation at the polls.

"It's an absolutely non-partisan board," Long said. "It's appointed by a Governor who can't even run for office."

In Louisiana the Governor is not eligible to run for re-election.

Talmadge Asserts New Deal Is Dying

Georgia Governor Predicts End in 18 Months.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, April 18.—"Any man who condones the NRA, the AAA and other things now going on in this country is a radical in the extreme," Gov. Talmadge said today.

"The greatest calamity to this country is that President Roosevelt can't walk around and hunt up people to talk to. He can only talk to those his secretaries and assistants allow to come in to see him—and 99 per cent of this crowd is the 'gimme' crowd."

The Governor flung pointed remarks at the Administration in general, including some of the officials, and predicted the New Deal Government would end within a year and a half.

"The NRA will quit NRA-ing and the AAA will quit AAA-ing and the process taxes will quit processing within a year and a half," he said.

Florida Senate Hits Tax on Chain Stores

Tallahassee, Fla., April 18 (AP).—Three Senate judiciary committees late today decided by a 10-to-8 vote to report that State Senator Henry Tillman's bill to outlaw chain stores in Florida by classing them as "evils" would be unconstitutional.

The report was made after Attorney General Cary D. Landis had declared in his opinion the measure would be valid.

Itinerant merchants and commissaries would also be banned under the measure, labeled the "Florida recovery act," and introduced in the State Senate by a son of South Carolina's "Pitchfork Ben" Tillman, colorful United States Senator of former years.

Jewish Group Backs Hitler.

Berlin, April 18 (U.P.).—Adolf Hitler gets praise from the Jews—that's news. The Association of Patriotic German-Jews sent Der Fuehrer a telegram today assuring him of their "unswerving fidelity to the fatherland." They hoped his government "will not alter its armaments policy despite the narrow-minded Geneva resolutions."

Georgia Governor Raps Roosevelt

affect allotments under the new works program, Ickes replied:

"I can't bind anyone else, but I like to do business with a man upon whose word I can rely."

Asked whether this meant that he would never "do business" with Talmadge in the future, Ickes said: "Draw your own conclusion."

Huey's Projects Delayed.

"Where local communities in Georgia have gone along in good faith," he continued, "we can't make them suffer, but we don't feel justified in going ahead with any new projects in Georgia."

Carrying a step further his threat to withdraw PWA funds from Louisiana if the Legislature there enacts bills proposed by Senator Long to control Government funds in that State, Ickes announced that he was withholding approval of three Louisiana projects now ready to be started and that he may withdraw others. The projects ready for approval would cost $648,000.

"I have not seen the bills that Emperor Long is threatening to pass, but I am holding up these projects," he said.

"What about Long's statement that he is coming back here and slam your ears back?" he was asked.

Speaks Plainly About Long.

"With or without bodyguards?" Ickes countered, "I wouldn't attempt to meet Emperor Long in any battle of objurgations or expletives.

"The trouble with Senator Long is that he is suffering from halitosis of the intellect."

Asked whether work already begun in Louisiana would be abandoned, Ickes said:

"If the Emperor moves in and takes possession, we'll have to meet the situation as it arises.

"At the rate the Emperor is going, he'll soon have a considerable share-the-unemployment movement under way in Louisiana."

Ickes said that among the projects that may be held up are a $4,000,000 bridge at Baton Rouge and a $640,000 housing program in New Orleans. The projects on which Ickes has withheld his signature are a $211,550 waterworks at Jenerette, a $277,300 bridge in Iberia Parish and a $160,000 sewer project at Lake Charles.

Hopkins Defends Right.

Discussing his recent action in taking relief administration out of the hands of Louisiana State officials and appointing a Federal administrator, Hopkins pointed out that the law provides that "whenever a Federal relief administrator feels relief could be better administered he has the power to take it over."

Hopkins said similar action may soon be taken in a number of other States, but he declined to name the States. The Government several weeks ago took over administration in Ohio on orders of President Roosevelt after it was charged the Democratic State committee had collected funds from business concerns supplying relief necessities.

Hopkins minimized possible difficulties arising from proposed Louisiana legislation, declaring "nothing is going to make it difficult to administer relief."

Pennsylvania "Pain in Neck."

Referring to Pennsylvania, Hopkins said the State "gives me a pain in the neck."

"Pennsylvania is one of the richest States in the Union, and the whole kaboodle of them are not putting up a dime for relief. The City of Brotherly Love has not put up a dime. They will put up $5,000,000 every month or they will not get a cent."

In reference to Illinois, he said he was not contemplating taking over the relief administration there. Pennsylvania requires about $20,000,000 a month for relief. It has been given $10,700,000 for April, and additional funds have been shut off. Illinois has asked for an additional $1,400,000 for April.

Won't Pay Back PWA.

Observers were startled by what were looked upon as unusually strong methods employed by Ickes and Hopkins. Political repercussions were foreseen. Both the Georgia and Louisiana administrations, however, are definitely anti-Administration, and in Illinois and Pennsylvania Republican members of the Legislatures are opposing high relief appropriations.

Referring to President Roosevelt's announcement that the country will be divided into districts for relief purposes, Hopkins said tentative districts already have been outlined.

Asked concerning Ickes' insistence that the FERA pay back $262,000,000 borrowed from PWA funds, Hopkins declared "Ickes will be on a pension before he gets that money back." He added that he believed Ickes was "kidding."

Two delegations called upon President Roosevelt yesterday asking approval of works projects. Representative Marvin Jones (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, called at the White House with Govs. Allred of Texas, and Tingley of New Mexico. They talked about three flood control and irrigation projects to cost an estimated $24,000,000.

Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, and Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, with House members from that State, urged presidential approval of the $35,000,000 Santee-Cooper power and canal project in South Carolina.

Meanwhile, Ickes announced that responding to written requests from Governors, PWA had drafted about 500 legislative measures designed to gear local machinery to the speed with which the Federal Government will prosecute the new work-relief program.

Ickes said that nearly every State had received requested legislation which, if enacted, will enable local communities better to secure public works benefits under the new appropriation.

Only Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia have failed to request drafts of such proposed legislation.

Pennsylvania Wins May 15 Continuance

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 18.—Gov. Earle informed the Legislature today that Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins had agreed to continue Federal unemployment relief in Pennsylvania until May 15 on passage of bills to transfer $5,000,000 from special State funds to provide the State's share of the burden.

The transfer bills have been passed by the Republican-controlled Senate, as a means of meeting the relief situation until an agreement has been reached on a tax program.

"In a telephone conversation with Federal Emergency Relief Administrator Hopkins today," Earle said, "I apprised him of the situation and at my earnest request he agreed to continue unemployment relief from April 15 to May 15, 1935, upon the contribution of the $5,000,000 which will be made available by reason of these transfers.

"In granting my request, however, the Federal Emergency Relief administrator stressed the fact that it is imperative that Pennsylvania shall enact a tax program which will insure that Pennsylvania will contribute $5,000,000 a month for unemployment relief for at least the next year.

Industry Index Again Records Marked Gains

Upturn in Durable Goods Is Attended by Increase in Employment.

ment raised the nondurable goods index to 94.8, indicating that nearly 95 out of every 100 workers employed in the nondurable goods industries during the years 1923-1925 had jobs in March."

Pay roll increases were greater in each group than employment gains, advancing 2.6 per cent in the durable goods category and 1.7 per cent in the other manufacturing industries. The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated that 121,000 workers were returned to employment in March in the 128,784 establishments surveyed.

The greatest employment increase in manufacturing industries (more than 18,000) was registered in the machinery group, while retail trade led the field in non-manufacturing industries. The index showed that nearly 36,000 workers returned to jobs in retail business, but this increase was discounted as a seasonal occurrence.

Despite the clamor raised by the textile industry against the cotton processing tax and Japanese competition, the index revealed an .8 per cent gain in the textile group, representing the re-employment of 13,000 workers. The increase was largely confined to certain wearing apparel industries, however, and a drop of 1.2 per cent was shown in cotton goods.

Increases in employment were reported in 30 States and the District of Columbia, which registered a gain of 2.1 per cent. The greatest gains were in Indiana and Minnesota, each with increases of 3.3 per cent, while Wyoming dropped 4.5 per cent and Florida 4.3 per cent.

A comparison of factory employment and pay rolls last month with conditions in March of 1933 shows a gain of 40.1 per cent in the number of employed and 90.8 per cent in the amount they are paid. Upturn in the durable goods industries was looked upon as the most important recent development. One explanation advanced for this is a marked quickening of construction activity, partly due to the stimulus of the Federal Housing Administration.

Encouraging statistics also came yesterday from the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Agricultural Economics. This agency reported that farm wages on April 1 were highest since 1932. The index for April 1 stood at 94 per cent of prewar, compared with 88 per cent the same date last year. The supply of farm hands, it was reported, is 38 per cent above demand, compared with 54 per cent last year.

Further evidence of improved conditions was given at a council meeting of regional officers of the Federal Home Loan Bank system. Chairman C. H. Stewart, of Portland, Oreg., declared house rentals have been swinging upward throughout the Nation, with the exception of New England. He believed it a forerunner to a "natural, normal resumption of residential building" to make up for the depression slack.

Heavy Fighting Marks Holy Week in Chaco

Buenos Aires, April 18 (AP).—Heavy fighting marked Holy Week on the Paraguay-Bolivian front. Bolivia announced today she had recaptured Boyuibe and La Tranca, outposts in the Chaco boreal.

Fighting is severe in the southern sector. Bolivia apparently launched a counter-offensive to counteract Paraguay's capture of Charagua, in Bolivia's Santa Cruz Province.

Bolivia, it is understood, hopes to cut some of Paraguay's communication lines between forces in the center of the Chaco and those operating in Santa Cruz.

New York, April 18 (AP).—Edward Morton McIlvain, a former president of the Bethlehem Steel Co., died today in his seventy-second year.

A native of Reading, Pa., he entered the employ of the Bethlehem Co. when it was formed and worked up from minor posts to the presidency, to which he was succeeded by Charles M. Schwab.

House Crushes Foes to Speed Security Bill

Radical Plans Rejected as Measure Is Pushed to Passage Today.

Urges Lundeen Amendment.

Adoption of the Lundeen amendment was urged by Chairman Connery of the Labor Committee as "essential if we are to take care of the great unemployed masses."

Its author, Representative Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Laborite), Minnesota, protested because the leadership denied roll-call votes on all of the substitute plans earlier described by Administration orators as "cockeyed."

After a slashing attack by Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), Massachusetts, acid-tongued Ways and Means committeeman, the Lundeen scheme was rejected, 136 to 40.

In the closing moments of the session Treadway led another fruitless movement to curb the scope of the omnibus bill. He was voted down, 125 to 49, when he sought to strike out a section calling for supplemental old-age pensions to be financed by pay-roll taxes of 6 per cent, shared equally by employers and workers.

"We're already overburdened, overtaxed and overinsulted," he protested.

Other Proposals Defeated.

Representatives Terry and Miller, Arkansas Democrats, worried by the inability of their State to match Federal old-age pension contributions, proposed to temporarily excuse States from putting up any money. Their amendments were killed.

Acrobatic Representative Truax (Democrat), Ohio, raced up and down the well of the floor as he demanded passage of an amendment to seize incomes above $1,000,000 a year as a means of financing the bill.

He lost, but not until he paid his respects to J. P. Morgan and "old Andy Mellon."

"If Morgan can't live on $1,000,000 a year," he said, "let him go to England, where he pays all his taxes anyhow."

Burtis to Be Returned For Conspiracy Trial

Indicted recently by the grand jury here on a charge of conspiracy to divulge confidential Government information, Guy S. Burtis, 55, of Chicago, formerly employed in the code division of the NRA, will be returned here at once from Chicago, where he waived extradition before a United States Commissioner Tuesday.

Burtis was indicted with W. L. Heap, of Chevy Chase, Md., on a charge of conspiring to obtain a fee from the Amer Mining Co., of Denver, by "fixing" an assessment against the company by the Internal Revenue Bureau, where Heap was employed in the audit division.

Pistol Registrations Urged by Cummings

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings advocated that pistols and revolvers be registered and taxed in the manner of automobiles.

"I do not think the present Federal firearms law, by any means, goes far enough," the Attorney General said at a press conference, though he said the present act requiring registration of machine guns, sub-machine guns, rifles, sawed-off shotguns and silencers "had helped the Government in seizing many of these weapons" and in keeping them out of criminal hands.

Reich Army Speeds Conscription Rules

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 18.—Official medical regulations for the military service released today said mental fitness, alertness, a sense of comradeship and firmness of character are requisites for young Germans.

Publication of the regulations was generally interpreted as an indication that the ministry of defense is hard at work to put Adolf Hitler's conscription law into effect as soon as possible.

Athletes and others well trained physically will be preferred for service in the army, navy and air force, said the instructions, which fixed a minimum height for military fitness at 5 feet 1 inch.

"Volunteers under 5 feet 3 inches will be enlisted, however, only under special circumstances," the regulations stated.

Physicians will classify conscripts as "fit, partly fit, partly unfit, limitedly fit, unfit for service and completely unfit."

Program Held at Mt. Vernon; Officers Are Named Without Contest.

Children of the American Revolution journeyed yesterday to Mount Vernon where ceremonies were held at the tomb of Washington and under the C. A. R. tree.

Two wreaths were placed on the tomb—one from Vermont, placed by Martha Shakespeare, of the Mercy Homes Mean Society, and one from Pennsylvania, placed by Laura Woomer, of the Gen. John Philip de Haas Society. Taps were sounded by William Percy Doing, jr., of Washington.

The exercises at the tree were conducted by Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, national president. The tree's history was told by Col. Harrison Dodge, superintendent of Mount Vernon. Mrs. Eleanor Washington Howard, national vice president, presided.

Short Service in Alexandria.

The pilgrimage group stopped at the church yard of the old Presbyterian Church at Alexandria where a short service was held at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the Revolution. A wreath, the gift of the Arkansas State Society, was placed on the grave by Cynthia and Barbara Doyle.

At the morning meeting of the group in the Red Cross auditorium a slate of officers was elected without contest. They were Mrs. Sinclair, president general; Mrs. Howard, vice president; Mrs. Frank Ray, recording secretary; Mrs. Lee Pennington, jr., organizing secretary; Mrs. Claude A Cooke, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, treasurer; Mrs. John A. Kerr, historian; Mrs. Charles S. Groves, librarian-curator, and Mrs. Percy M. Bailey, chaplain.

The following contest winners were announced: Magazine, the Cayuga Society of Penn Yan, N. Y.; building fund, the General Huntington Society of Connecticut, and membership, Wilbur T. Hall, of the Robert French Society of New Jersey. The stamp contest winners were Averill Wirgman, of Washington; Alex McKechnie, jr., and Penn and Joan Lee Dyor, of Connecticut.

The convention adjourned yesterday after the Mount Vernon ceremonies.

Miss Pauline Rudacliffe, Front Royal, has been elected May Queen, and included in her court will be the Misses Mary Arndt, Flora Strayer, Ruth Phenicie, Lois Weller and Rebecca Walker.

Crash Scrambles 1,800 Easter Eggs

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 18.—Eggs numbering 1,800 were on their way to the Easter market in Baltimore, but only the farmer who was bringing them to town will be blue.

The eggs—the entire 150 dozen—were scrambled in an automobile accident before Easter celebrants could hard boil them and apply the dye.

Ephriam T. Myers, farmer of Westminster, had them in his car when it collided with the machine of William Burkhard in a nearby suburb.

Neither driver was hurt, but Myers was "wearing" all the eggs when he crawled out of his machine.

NRA to Investigate Tidewater Wages

By the Associated Press.

Hague, Va., April 18.—Weld Stevens, a deputy administrator for the National Recovery Administration, and members of several NRA advisory boards are to visit the Tidewater section some day this week to investigate complaints of canners that the wages they are forced to pay are too high.

The inquiry is the outgrowth of two protests entered last week by the Tidewater Canners Association against wage and other provisions of the NRA codes governing canners. The issue was laid before both a NRA board and the Senate Finance Committee.

Albemarle Plans To Merge Schools

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 18.—At the April meeting of the Albemarle County School Board, further consolidation of schools for next year was considered.

Final action will be taken next month, but it is possible pupils at Edgewood and Turkey Sag, in the eastern end of the county, will be transferred to Cismont for the grades, and to Stony Point for the high school work. Rockfield children, according to dentative plans, will be transferred to Meriwether Lewis School, near Ivy, and the Garland School pupils will be carried by bus to Red Hill.

This move, Supt. A. L. Bennett stated, will be in the interest of economy and efficiency. The consolidation of Albemarle schools was begun many years ago.

Maine's Governor Pays Visit to Nice

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, April 18.—Gov. Louis J. Brann of Maine was a visitor to Gov. Harry W. Nice today. The Maine executive is on a good-will tour along the Atlantic seaboard.

Gov. Nice escorted the visitor through the State house. He was shown the old Senate chamber where George Washington resigned his commission as commander in chief of the Continental Army.

The Maryland executive was invited to a fishing party in Maine on May 25. He accepted.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 18.—The annual hunter trials of the Keswick Hunt Club, scheduled for last week but postponed because of the cold rain, will be held tomorrow afternoon at Tall Oaks, home of Mrs. John M. Hopkins, 1 mile east of Keswick depot.

Four events, for lightweight hunters, middle and heavyweight hunters, open-to-all hunters and a point-to-point race, are to be ridden by teams of two, lady and gentleman, over approximately an 8-mile course of Keswick hunting country.

The trials will get under way promptly at 1 o'clock.

D. A. R. Today To Honor Hero Of Revolution

Mrs. Magna Will Unveil Marker on Grave of Md. Officer.

Almost two centuries after his birth, a Maryland soldier in the Revolutionary War will be honored today by the D. A. R. He was Lieut. Hugh Auld, and he served in the militia of Talbot County, Md.

Mrs. Russell William Magna, president general, will lead a pilgrimage to his grave in Arlington National Cemetery and unveil a D. A. R. marker.

Several graves of Revolutionary soldiers have been discovered in Arlington quite by accident, the congress was told yesterday by Mrs. Amos A. Fries. Many have been marked in the last few years.

She is Mary Lorena Deaderick, 21 years old and thrilled, indeed, by the ceremony and pageantry of her first D. A. R. Congress.

Last Monday, when the convention opened, she made the mistake of entering the Pan-American Building instead of Memorial Continental Hall, which is across the street.

"I saw so many flags flying there I thought that was the place," she said in a Bristol, Va., drawl. (Monday was Pan-American Day, and the P.-A. Building was even more elaborately decorated with bunting than D. A. R. headquarters.)

"Nothing like being young and dumb," Miss Deaderick giggled, going off to join her delegation.

Following are the names of the girls, all of them permanent employes at D. A. R. headquarters, who raised $100 to help abolish the debt on Constitution Hall:

Miss Janie H. Glascock, Mrs. Jeannette Jackson, Miss Marion T. Harrop, Miss Isabel Allmond, Miss Eva J. Bright, Mrs. Nellie G. Dietz, Mrs. Helen W. Rogers, Miss Louise Poindexter, Mrs. Evelyn F. Brown, Mrs. Dorothy Roberts, Miss Mary Moler and Mrs. Elsie Penicks.

presented for patriotic essays by college students.

The Maryland State regent, Mrs. Arthur P. Shanklin, stated that 60 historic trees from all parts of the country were dedicated at the University of Maryland, $10,801 was raised to reduce the debt on Constitution Hall and 1,000 Boy Scouts were given flags for a mass demonstration in Baltimore.

Preservation and restoration of old courthouse records and other documents constituted Virginia's outstanding work, said Mrs. Charles B. Keesee, State regent. Old Dominion chapters also are marking the graves of Revolutionary soldiers, restoring historic spots and erecting monuments, as well as performing myriad other duties, the regent stated.

In a supplemental report of the credentials committee, Chairman Page Schwarzwaelder said total registration was 4,375, including delegates, alternates and 700 visiting members.

The only visiting speaker yesterday was Dr. C. H. Lavinder, of the United States Public Health Service, who praised the D. A. R. for its cooperation and aid in administering the Marine Hospital on Ellis Island.

Bloodhounds Locate Stolen Hens, and a Still

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., April 18. — Looking for stolen chickens Wednesday night bloodhounds following an 11-mile chase in the Blue Ridge Mountains, near Rileyville, 9 miles north of Luray, not only found chickens, but located a 60-gallon still as well.

Floyd Bailey, 29, and Mrs. Ollie Walker, 19, were taken into custody. Officers making the arrest were Deputy Sheriff David Fox and Special Policeman Herman Seal. The chickens found had been killed and dressed, but not eaten. Bailey confessed the theft, officers said. The chickens were taken from E. R. Richard, of Rileyville.

5-Lawyer Jury Makes History for City

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 18. Court records fell and precedents were established yesterday as five lawyers sat as a Corporation Court jury to decide a damage suit involving the sum of $30.50.

The fact that all the jurymen were lawyers was entirely new in the annals of local jurisprudence. An additional new feature was the smoking privilege granted by Judge Frederick W. Coleman.

The case was that of L. J. Schott Co. vs. Dillon Motor Co. The question was whether Mr. Dillon should pay for a shipment of tires which he had ordered on the expectation of getting a discount. He contended the Schott Co. did not allow the discount.

The jury returned three minutes after it went out with a verdict in favor of the defendant.

The jury were William K. Goolrick, Francis B. Gouldman, W. Marshall King, S. Bernard Coleman and Commonwealth's Attorney W. B. F. Cole.

Dr. Fulton Urges A Christian Japan

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 18.—As the Western World has given Japan its civilization, it is now up to the churches to give the empire Christianity, Dr. Darby Fulton, Nashville, Tenn., foreign mission secretary of the Presbyterian Church and a former missionary in the Far East, declared tonight in the principal address at the thirty-first annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Lexington Presbytery, Synod of Virginia.

Today's sessions were devoted to discussion of missions and the hearing of departmental reports. The meeting ends tomorrow with the election of officers. The executive meeting met in preliminary session last night.

Grade Crossing Removal Asked By Albermarle

County School Board Sees Peril to 100 Pupils At Ivy Depot.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 18.—Taking a cue from the recent tragedy in Maryland, the Albemarle County school board, at its April meeting, petitioned the State highway department to eliminate a grade crossing on the main line of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway at Ivy depot, 3 miles west of Charlottesville.

"We have," Superintendent A. L. Bennett stated, "more than 100 children transported twice daily over this dangerous crossing, which is made more hazardous by an obstructed view. It is the hope of school officials that Federal funds may be used to eliminate this, the only main-line grade crossing used by a school bus in Albemarle County."

The State department of education was requested by the school board to proceed with plans for a modern school building to replace the one destroyed by fire a year ago at Earlysville, in the northern end of the county.

School officials hope to obtain Federal funds to aid in the erection of this building.

HIGHLIGHTS IN THE HISTORY OF "SHELF-AGE"

Columbus Discovered America —and the faults of "Shelf-Age"

THE lack of FRESH FOODS . . . fresh meats and vegetables . . . nearly spelled disaster to Columbus' voyage of discovery. Because the vital element of natural FRESHNESS was lacking in their food supplies, the sailors of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria were stricken with scurvy and other diseases and only by the greatest of good fortune was Columbus able to keep the ships on their course . . . Other navigators of earlier centuries soon discovered that lack of FRESH foods was responsible for many illnesses . . . Meats, vegetables and other foods may be available in ample quantities—BUT—if they lack the vital element of NATURAL FRESHNESS they are also lacking in flavor, food value and health-giving properties.

Borah Lashes League, Moves To Halt Loans

Idahoan Offers Plan to Ban Foreign Credit by Americans.

By Robert C. Albright.

Lashing the League of Nations Council as the "spineless tool" of continental "masters," Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, yesterday moved to cut off the American flow of loans to European nationals.

Aroused at the council's assault on German repudiation of the Versailles Treaty, Senator Borah said the League has ceased to be "an independent body for peace." He introduced a resolution to prevent foreign loans by American firms or private parties, except on this continent.

His bitter attack on the League Council followed, taken up and elaborated by Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, who demanded European debtor nations show the same "faith" in their obligations to this country that they now ask of Germany.

Admonished by Roosevelt.

Earlier, the Senate Munitions Committee's search of J. P. Morgan & Co. wartime correspondence brought a mild admonition from the White House. Sitting in on a conference with the President and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, three members of the committee were advised of international "complications" that could result.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, of North Dakota, chairman of the committee, agreed to carefully study confidential correspondence retrieved from J. P. Morgan & Co. files, and consult with the State Department before deciding on publication. Leading up to the conference, representations were said to have been made to the State Department by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador.

Hits Directly at League.

Senator Borah accompanied his resolution with a statement warning that any money loaned to Europe at this time will be "in aid of war."

Then, taking the Senate floor, he struck directly at the league, which, he said, through its German rebuke, has demonstrated "its subservient obedience to its masters."

"Nothing in the history of this institution better illustrates that it is not an independent body for peace, but a spineless tool in the hands of a few nations to do what those nations elect," he said.

"The league as an institution should not longer pretend to be an independent body seeking by independent methods to advance the cause of peace."

Lewis Demands Probe.

The Borah speech came at the conclusion of a charge by Senator Lewis that the security for portions of the unpaid European war debt has been "removed" from the Treasury. Declaring the "securities have been allowed to leave our Government and to be returned to the people who gave them as security for the debt," Lewis asked an investigation.

Like Borah, he struck at league demands for fulfillment of treaty contracts. England, he said, announces to the world it has balanced its budget and is reducing taxes, while leaving her war debt unpaid.

"On this basis laid by the Council as to the obligations of Germany, we, the United States, demand the same faith and obedience to the obligations these debtor nations owe to the United States on the obligations they have contracted with the United States," Lewis said.

Might Embarrass Britain.

While the Borah-Lewis assault on the league was in full cry, members of the Senate Munitions Committee, at the White House, discussed possibility of war-time revelations "embarrassing" to Great Britain resulting from the committee's investigation. The Morgan house is fiscal agent for the British government in this country.

Senators Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, and James P. Pope, of Idaho (Democrat), accompanied Nye to the White House. It was learned that a hypothetical case was cited—that of a possible letter suggesting the allies could no longer hold out without American aid. In instances of this type, it was suggested, the Nye committee would do well to consult with the State Department.

Nye said the commitee made no commitments, but did not desire to "muddy international waters." He said they may find it advisable to suppress some of the communications found in the Morgan files.

"Ours is a committee for peace, not war," Nye said.

Second Warning in Week.

It was the second time in a week the committee had been cautioned by the White House. Recently the President advised Nye not to call in the Colt Firearms Co., pending negotiations to settle its labor controversy with NRA.

The State Department has in its files a note written on the eve of America's entry into the war to the Secretary of State from Walter Hines Page, then Ambassador to Great Britain, pointing to an "international condition alarming to the American financial and industrial outlook."

Dated March 5, 1917, the letter reads in part:

"I think that the pressure of this approaching crisis has gone beyond the ability of the Morgan Financial Agency for the British and French governments. The need is becoming too great and urgent for any private agency to meet. For every such agency has to encounter jealousies of rivals and of actions.

"Perhaps our going to war is the only way in which our present preeminent trade position can be maintained and a panic averted."

It was said the British desire to avoid another stirring up of "old hatreds" that might result from undue publicity to some correspondence.

Borah Warns of War.

Demanding immediate cessation of American loans to Europe, Senator Borah meanwhile took up his ancient cudgels against the league.

European governments now, he said, are preparing for war.

"The best authorities on European conditions give it as their opinion that war is practically inevitable within the next five or ten years," he said in a statement. "Therefore, we are practically contributing to its preparation by any loans we should make."

He said money loaned will be used to increase armaments, and, if war breaks out, American investments in Europe would prove a powerful factor in dragging this country in.

"Furthermore, loans in Europe are unsafe," he continued. "They are not good investments for our people. Europe has repudiated about $11,000,000,000 which was loaned under the most sacred circumstances.

"Article 297 of the Treaty of Versailles undertook to make confiscation of the private property of nationals of defeated countries respectable. We have nothing to gain by making loans where repudiation and confiscation prevail.

"Further, in the interest of our own country, our money should not be loaned abroad, but should be used at home."

The board of directors announced yesterday that prizes will be awarded at 4 p. m. Monday in the stores where their works are being shown.

Each store has at least two prize-winning pictures—one which has captured the store's own purchase award and another which has won a patron's award or some special one.

The stores where the works will be exhibited are Lansburgh & Bro., Woodward & Lothrop, Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., Julius Garfinckel & Co., the Hecht Co., W. B. Moses & Sons, Palais Royal, S. Kann Sons Co., and W. J. Sloane.

As the patrons would not be able to visit all nine stores on the opening day, they will be divided into groups and each group asked to visit a particular store.

It is planned to have the donors of prizes award them to the artists. The names of those who will make the awards will be announced Monday morning.

Artists receiving prizes are expected to be at the exhibit not later than 3:30 p. m. Monday.

The exhibit, which is being sponsored by The Washington Post and the Federation of Women's Clubs, is designed to supply local artists with a permanent market and to make their output more available to the public at large.

talked to his advisers. Well informed quarters predicted that the army's control of the government would be strengthened, not weakened, whoever is made premier. Both Koleff and Radeff are army men.

Questions as to what part Boris played in the arrests and what his intentions were went unanswered. Since the January coup the King has shown an increasing disposition to exert his authority in Bulgaria's government, and some quarters expected new evidences of this tendency might be forthcoming shortly.

The fate of Damyan Zelcheff, influential friend of Gueorgieff and another member of the directorate, remained uncertain tonight, although it was reported he also was slated for internment.

Zelcheff's friendship with army officers, many of whom he trained, led to the belief in some quarters that differences between him and Zlateff might split the army into two contending factions. The resigning premier and the Gueorgieff faction have been at odds over the participation of army men in the cabinet.

Another factor in the situation was the fact that one of the three ministers who resigned today, Diekoff, has behind him Bulgaria's politically militant youth.

Valuable Old Book Lost In Apartment Blaze

An early morning fire in an apartment at 1208 Eighteenth street northwest yesterday destroyed a valuable seventeenth century dictionary belonging to Prew Savoy, an attorney in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.

The blaze started in a fireplace of Savoy's third-floor apartment. H. S. McDonald, jr., who lives with Savoy, summoned firemen. A few hours after the blaze was extinguished firemen were recalled when passersby saw smoke and steam drifting from the apartment windows.

Each of three groups in the squadron will be named for "one of those who died for the victory of National-Socialism and the German people." The entire squadron probably will be named "Horst Wessel" for the Nazi martyr, thus bringing this Nazi national hero equal honor with the Reich's three World War aces, Richthofen, Boelcke and Immelmann, for whom squadrons already have been named.

England Awaiting Hitler's Message

By the Associated Press.

London, April 18.—Great Britain, bearing the brunt of Germany's indignation at League of Nations censure of her rearmament, tonight awaited anxiously the outcome of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's secret conferences with his collaborators.

Government circles expressed the view that the protest Bernard W. von Buelow, German foreign undersecretary, made to the British ambassador, Sir Eric Phipps, last night, was not directed specifically at Britain's policy at Geneva.

It was learned, however, that Von Buelow told Ambassador Phipps Hitler was "hurt" at British support of the tri-power resolution adopted by the league council, saying it was entirely unexpected.

However, diplomatic quarters said they did not believe the Reich would refuse to cooperate in the series of international agreements now under negotiation.

County Asking State for Ten Road Projects

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., April 18.—Ten road and bridge projects are being asked of Gov. Peery's commission on highways by the Page County Board of Supervisors. The cost of the projects would approximate $500,000 and nine are considered absolutely necessary, the resolution sent the commission stated. A visit by the commission will be made to Page County shortly to investigate the necessity of the projects.

In a special resolution forwarded today to W. O. Rogers, Waverley, chairman of the commission, the work of the State Highway Department is commended. A copy of the resolution was sent to H. G. Shirley, State highway commissioner, and William East, Valley member. The resolution condemns the present method of distributing highway construction funds among several construction districts, and advocates the division of construction funds on the basis of costs of uncompleted mileage in the State highway system.

The projects mentioned are the same advocated at a recent meeting before the Special Study Commission in Culpeper. They include four bridges on the east side highway. Another bridge is asked over Naked Creek on the Page-Rockingham line, where 22 wrecks have occurred. A bridge is also asked west of Luray and approaches to Luray are asked to be improved.

The resolution further states that these projects are not asked for the sake of spending money, but to eliminate curves and minimize dangers of wrecks.

In addition to the need for these projects the county officials feel that Federal funds can best be used to this purpose because of the case load of 400 on the FERA and the 700 or 800 unemployed not on relief lists.

Economist Hits Money Policies Of Roosevelt

Unprecedented Inflation On Way, Says Liberty League Spokesman.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—The monetary policies of the Roosevelt Administration were assailed tonight by an American Liberty League spokesman, who said "we are faced with an inflation that will exceed anything our country ever experienced."

In the second league attack on the New Deal within two days, Dr. Ray Bert Westerfield, professor of political economy at Yale and member of the league's national advisory council, said in a radio address that America might repeat the experience of Germany.

"I can confidently say that the basis is laid for the greatest expansion in the history of American banking and currency," Dr. Westerfield said.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, in its last annual report, he added, estimated that the existing reserve would support $80,000,000,000 of deposits. The monetary expansion, he added, quoting another authority, could run to $65,000,000,000 if business does not recover, and to $93,000,000,000 if business does recover.

"Moreover," Dr. Westerfield said, "if the velocity of circulation rises, as it always does during inflation, and if we continue to buy gold and silver, and still more if we devalue the dollar further, this potential inflation is multiplied accordingly.

"It appears, therefore, that unless some unforeseen preventives are originated, we are faced with an inflation that will exceed anything our country ever experienced. If it is allowed to run its course and merely be controlled when it reaches the maximum expansion possible within the existing legal reserve limitation, the inflation will apparently approach that of France in the post-war period. In default of such control, the experience of Germany will be more comparable to what we may expect."

Dr. Westerfield said gains of agriculturists, industrialists, speculators and profiteers would be at the expense of other people. Salaried persons and wage earners would suffer, he said, and those who pay salaries and wages would profit because they would pay less real value.

Maryland Man Flees Blizzard

Autoists Reach SafetyFrom Pikes Peak After Colorado Storm.

By the Associated Press.

Colorado Springs, Colo., April 18. John Eareckson, Baltimore, Md., wrestler, staggered 15 miles through a blinding overnight blizzard from near the top of Pikes Peak to reach safety today at a miner's shack near Cripple Creek.

Between 30 and 40 cars also were recovered from snowdrifts along the Divide-Cripple Creek highway, where they had been marooned all night.

Eareckson had been picked up by a railroad engineer.

"I was trying to reach the top of the 14,000-foot peak to satisfy an ambition to climb it. The storm struck suddenly yesterday afternoon, but I was feeling so fine I thought I could get on through it.

"Finally it turned into a terrific blizzard when I still was miles from the top. I wandered all night in it, just walking blind. When daylight came I found I had apparently been wandering in circles. I was numb and cold and could barely travel. Finally I reached a miner's cabin and he gave me hot coffee and food. Then I started out again and came to the railroad where a freight train engineer gave me a ride and kept me warm."

When Eareckson reached here he was placed in a warm bed and given hot drinks at the Y. M. C. A.

He was one of a party of 13 Y. M. C. A. athletes from Baltimore, who had participated in the National A. A. U. wrestling meet at Oklahoma City. They were sightseeing in Colorado.

F. D. Smith Dies; 'Monocle Lawyer'

His Glass, Attire as Kansas Senator Startled.

By the Associated Press.

Hutchinson, Kans., April 18.—F. Dumont Smith—known as "the Kansas lawyer who wore a monocle"—died today at the age of 74.

Smith also amazed his Kansas constituents in 1905 while a State senator by wearing dove-colored spats and swinging a cane.

Nationally known in the field of law, he created wide attention in 1931 when he differed sharply with Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart, Harvard historian. Smith, then chairman of the Americanization committee of the American Bar Association, asserted that Hart's George Washington Bicentennial pamphlet was filled with inaccuracies and "slurs."

He was born in Illinois.

New Air Instruments To Be Tested in Flight

The National Geographic Society announced late yesterday that a test balloon flight 25,000 feet up to try out several newly designed instruments for studying the upper atmosphere would be made early next week.

If the instruments prove satisfactory, the society said, they will be taken into the stratosphere, probably 13 or 14 miles above the earth, during the National Geographic-Army Air Corps flight next June in the Black Hills of South Dakota. Next week's test flight will be made from Scott Field, Ill., near East St. Louis.

Johnson Sworn as Witness at NRA Inquiry

Underwood & Underwood.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson (at the extreme right) as he took the oath before testifying in the Senate Finance Committee's NRA investigation. Members of the committee are, left to right, Senators King, Harrison, chairman of the committee, Keyes and Capper.

NRA a Barrier Against Ruin, Johnson Says

them. But it was the first intelligent attempt ever made by this Government to check this tendency (destruction of small enterprises. I won't admit its failure. Especially I won't accede to any madness that would remove its control and go back to the unregulated condition of futility that preceded it. No more explosive act of destruction could be committed than to kill it now and go back to the utter futility of the system we had here before 1933."

Urges Price, Income Balance.

Johnson said he did not believe that the country would catch up with prosperity by trying artificially to boost all wages and all prices. He said he believed, however, that prices and income should be brought nearer to a balance.

Discussing the antitrust laws, Johnson said:

"Our attempts to legislate restraints upon competition in the public interest have failed—thereby allowing restraints upon competition against the public interest to flourish. The results of this failure—the price wars, absorption of smaller enterprises, sweating of labor and all the other evils—we had with us in 1932 and 1933."

Johnson said he did not contend that "rotten provisions" did not creep into codes and that NRA personnel was not far from perfect.

"But I do contend," he added, "and I think I can show that such faults as arose were due to my bad administration rather than bad law; that many, if not most, of these errors of mine are in process of effective correction. I am very sure that to destroy NRA because there are these creaky joints in its structure would be like burning down your house to get rid of a few rats in the attic."

Says Small Business Aided

Johnson, throughout his testimony, carefully avoided direct criticism of the present NRA administration, although he has repeatedly said elsewhere that the Blue Eagle is dead and that NRA is being destroyed.

Starting his argument that the NRA is not a creature of big business, Johnson declared that it has "succeeded in arresting the destruction of the little fellow in business." Retailers and small stores, he said, are making the best headway against the depression. In this connection he put into the record communications from 39 organizations representing groups of small businesses and asking for NRA extension.

"The most persistent and consistent opponents of codes have been the big interests," he said, "while the most zealous advocates of codes have been the small business men."

Johnson quoted figures to show huge profits of the tobacco industry and declared the total wages of the industry could be doubled without the slightest effect on the price of the product to the consumer.

Raps Big Industry.

As Johnson attacked the tobacco manufacturers, S. Clay Williams, former recovery board chairman and head of one of the country's greatest tobacco concerns, closely followed the general's manuscript, of which he had a copy.

"Generally speaking, it is the big and not the little merchant who objects to open price provisions," Johnson said. "He is the one who wants his rebates, special prices and purchase-control provisions which are his principal weapon against his small competitors."

Johnson then went into a discussion of the tin-can manufacturing business, citing huge profits and identical prices. He pointed out that the code for this industry had no open-price provisions.

One of the outstanding accomplishments of the codes, he said, was prevention of selling of "loss leaders" below cost.

"It is beyond my comprehension," he said, "how anyone who pretends to be interested in the little fellow can advocate throwing away the only instrument for his protection and leaving him to the competition which is becoming more and more ruthless, making it impossible for him to have any chance of survival."

Discussing the Darrow Board, Johnson said he had formed it in good faith.

"But it was not in good faith," he said. "It was a political wailing wall and it recommended Communism. There was not one fair hearing before it.

"They disregarded NIRA, packed the record with framed testimony, disregarded every judicial rule of fairness known to man, solicited and accepted unsupported statements, restricted or ignored testimony unfavorable to their purpose, hazed witnesses on the other side, insulted NRA officials, and for this spent $50,000 of Government money."

Discussing labor provisions, Johnson said that NRA had not fully insured the rights intended to be granted to labor. He said he felt that the hope that labor would be permitted to organize on a broad scale for representative bargaining had been frustrated. He said Section 7(a) had been so obscured by conflicting interpretations that it could not be construed as a definite labor policy. He advocated majority representation for labor, and codes for labor.

"I think Section 7(a) has failed of its original purpose," he said.

Favors U. S. Control.

He said full prosperity depends on further reduction in hours and increases in hourly rates. He said he did not agree with the Black 30-hour week bill, but that he believed the Government should control wages and hours.

Johnson described NRA as an "attempt to make the profit system work."

"In the whole question," he said, "my conclusion is, Clean up NRA—don't destroy it. Let us scrub our infant offspring vigorously, but let us not throw the baby down the drain pipe with the dirty water."

Discussing the extent to which business regulation should be carried, Johnson said he believed there would be great difficulty in carrying regulation to local service industries. He described his own attempt to do so as "one of the greatest mistakes of NRA." He said he believed NRA should attempt to regulate business through codes "where it is clearly necessary to protect interstate commerce and not otherwise."

"Just a Big Bugaboo."

Johnson denied there had been any extensive price fixing under NRA and described price fixing as "just a big bugaboo."

Discussing what should be done about NRA, Johnson asked that the terms "monopoly," "unfair competition" and "interstate commerce" be clearly defined. He asked for more general representation of labor and consumers on code boards. He suggested in each industry a trade practices complaints committee and a labor board. He asked for a "revivified symbol of public support," but he did not directly mention the Blue Eagle. He suggested that the symbol should not be removed for noncompliance by any agency except the courts.

"One of the most valid criticisms against the whole New Deal is the fact that from time to time it has sorely lacked coordination," Johnson said. He said the AAA had been slow in raising prices and that the PWA had been slow in bringing about reemployment, adding that the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice had not proceeded vigorously in enforcement of NRA.

Summing up, Johnson said, "We can't make another mistake like 1929 to 1932—one more, and the fat is in the fire. If we can't regulate this economic engine, the next step will be abolition of the profit system—and page Mr. Stalin."

Johnson's testimony concluded six weeks of NRA hearings by the Senate committee.

Bank Robbers Sought As Kidnapings Subside

St. Paul, April 18 (AP).—Kidnaping cases are now largely routine affairs, which local government attorneys can handle, and the Department of Justice is concentrating on bank robbers, Joseph B. Keenan, of Washington, First Assistant Attorney General and the Government's crime ace, declared here today.

"The kidnaping cases have been whipping into pretty good shape," he said. "While the department in Washington intends to follow all of them, we believe they can be handled now by the regular United States attorneys, rather than by specialists."

Ethiopian Official Sees War Clouds Dispelling

Rome, April 18 (AP).—Negradas Yesus, Ethiopian charge d'affaires, said tonight that although Italy continues to send soldiers and war materials to East Africa, his country is making no preparations for war.

He said Italy's recent agreement for conciliation, on some of the points raised since the nations became involved in border clashes in East Africa, "had done much to ease the tension and dispel the war clouds over East Africa."

New Deal Has Liberty on Run, Charges Mills

By the United Press.

Brunswick, Me., April 18.—Ogden Mills, Republican leader and former Secretary of the Treasury, told political students at Bowdoin College tonight that the New Deal philosophy leads America toward Fascism or Communism.

He spoke on "Constitutional Liberty," which he termed the "twin pillars of both political and economic freedom upon which we have built the American nation." Mills said these principles are challenged for the first time since the Declaration of Independence.

After outlining growth of the United States up to the financial crash and the depression, Mills said:

"As the depression grows . . . men challenge the soundness of the foundations upon which our national life has been built. They ascribe our troubles to the failures of individualism. They believe that the few are better able to direct the lives of the many than they themselves.

Cites Controlled Society.

"They believe . . . that the constant intervention of the Government in the economic life of the Nation is essential. Their alternative for what they call the chaos of individual enterprise is a governmentally planned and controlled society.

"This is the philosophy underlying the New Deal. It can not be squared with the basic principles of Americanism. It is a direct challenge to constitutional liberty.

"It means the end of economic freedom and ultimately the death of democratic institutions. They inevitably break down under the new and unintended duties imposed upon them. Arbitrary power necessarily grows. It soon expands beyond the economic domain.

"The Fascist or Communist state emerges. And the curtain falls on the whole of the civilization inherited from generations who thought it worth the sacrifice of their lives to establish."

Mills said the depression has been prolonged by "experiments borrowed from the Fascist laboratory."

"We have sacrificed constitutional liberty to the god of planning, and what has it gotten us?" he asked. "Confusion worse confounded and one-sixth of our population on the relief roll."

Mills extolled the economic system which prevailed for 100 years before the World War and said:

"We must not allow the suffering of recent depression years to blind us to the great achievements of free enterprise when measured over a longer period."

Cases in Montgomery Net $1,693 Fines, Costs

Trial of 292 criminal cases in March by the Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville, Md., resulted in imposition of fines and costs amounting to $1,693, Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt reported to the Montgomery County Commissioners yesterday.

The fines were divided as follows: Motor vehicle violation, $989.50, to be forwarded to the commissioner of motor vehicles; other cases, $320.50 and costs of $383. Trial of 23 civil cases resulted in collection of costs totaling $47. Dog taxes collected amounted to $661.25.

of restricting production below the levels it would otherwise have attained, hence that it has reduced the total amount of employed."

On the credit side, the report said that NRA "efforts to facilitate competition are its most creditable additions to he economic structure."

"The rise of prices prevented the increase in the total real purchasing power of labor expected to accrue from wage raising," the report said. "Some groups of workers had their incomes raised more than living costs, while others lost ground; some employers were able to raise their prices more than their costs, others less; but, on the whole, price and wage-rate levels both moved to considerably higher ground without material change in their relative positions. The codes, moreover, made little change in the distribution of the aggregate income from production between employers and employes considered collectively.

"Not only did the program fail to work out as planned, but the plan itself was in our judgment a mistake."

The report declared that conditions were not propitious for a sizable expansion of wages at the expense of profits.

"If this had occurred," it continued, "it would probably have frozen up more purchasing power than it released. Under the circumstances little could be gained by forcing into the hands of wage earners for consumer expenditure a small part of the funds otherwise destined for some form of capital investment."

Hold Money Still Idle.

The codes, the report concluded, apparently evoked no expansion of bank credit and no lasting activities of the idle money of the country.

"It is very doubtful," it continued, "if the higher wage and price levels enlarged the dollar volume of expenditure after the boom by enough to compensate for their absorption of expenditure. They tended to diminish the physical volume of production."

The report described internal adjustments of the cost and price structure effected by the NRA as "for the most part planless and haphazard." It declared they retarded the restoration of parity for agricultural prices and the adjustment of construction costs to the demand for building.

"On the whole," it said, "they were probably adverse to the revival of the capital goods industries. As a means of securing favorable specific readjustments in the cost-price structure, the NRA as it actually operated was of very doubtful benefit."

Monetary Expansion Favored.

The NRA, the report declared, "put the cart before the horse" by trying to raise purchasing power by boosting costs and prices. It suggested that instead spending could have been increased by removal of the deterrents to the free and prompt utilization of the existing money of the country and by monetary expansion.

"The conclusion indicated by this resume is that the NRA on the whole retarded recovery," it continued. "To what extent it was detrimental no one can say with much assurance. * * * We do not feel justified in stating our own judgment more definitely than to say that the retarding effect of NRA has been substantial."

No valid conclusion, the economists found, can be drawn from the fact that some progress toward recovery has been made. It pointed out that even if it had occurred in spite of NRA its partisans would have claimed the credit.

"The NRA has done much to propagate the fallacy that raising wage rates is in itself a good thing," the report declared. "So far as we are aware it has made all of its wage adjustments in one direction—upward. It has gone far to spread abroad the idea that wage rates should never be reduced, and to make downward revision difficult even under adequate justification and proper safeguards."

Sees Danger in Program.

It was pointed out that freezing of the wage level against reduction has involved a considerable freezing of the price structure.

"This tendency to freeze the cost and price structure against downward adjustment must be regarded as one of the most potentially important long-run effects of the NRA. During periods of expanding national income and rising prices its influence will tend of course to diminish, but whenever the economy runs into periods of maladjustment and declining demand these relatively frozen bottoms may prove a serious barrier to the maintenance of the physical volume of production and distribution.

"It is necessary in an economy based upon a price system that prices, whether for labor or goods, move in response to changing conditions. * * *

"In view of the fact that the two most powerful forces behind NRA—organized labor and organized industry—are generally committed in the one case to the doctrine that wages should never be reduced, and in the other case to the idea of 'price stabilization,' and 'cost protection,' the prospect that NRA will reverse the trend we have just described seems far from bright. We may have to be content if it refrains from a further unwarranted boosting of wage and price levels in its historic pursuit of purchasing power."

Fear of Landon Stirs Protest Of Kansas Rally

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Apprehensions that the proposed Midwestern Republican "pep" meeting at Kansas City may be turned into a presidential boom for Gov. Alf Landon yesterday resulted in a demand from important Capitol Hill Republicans that the gathering take place in some other State, preferably on "neutral ground."

So active have Kansas Republicans been in promoting party activity in recent weeks that a desire to advance the presidential prospects of their Governor is being read now into every move they make. Other contenders for the Republican nomination, their friends and party leaders with plans of their own, consequently, look with distavor on the apparent attempt of the Sunflower State to monopolize the political stage.

White Arrives Here.

Aside from this Capitol Hill development, Kansas yesterday continued to hold the Republican spotlight as William Allen White, Emporia editor, arrived in the city, with Henry J. Allen, former Senator from Kansas. White, although disclaiming any intimate relationship to the proposed "pep" meeting, will be the central figure of a Republican pow-wow on Capitol Hill tomorrow.

John Hamilton, Republican national committeeman from Kansas, recently visited in Washington while Gov. Landon was here a few days ago in connection with relief projects for his State, but he did not shun meeting Republicans from other States. It is this series of visits, along with the eagerness of Kansans for the proposed "pep" meeting, that has disturbed Republicans here from other States.

May Be Abandoned.

This feeling has become sufficiently widespread and deep to make it a foregone conclusion that the Midwestern meeting of Republicans will be held some place other than Kansas City, if it is held at all. The feeling persists here that the meeting will be held, but factional strife may yet force the leaders to abandon all plans for the gathering.

One suggestion is that the meeting take place in Chicago, but objections to that are made on the ground the Illinois metropolis is the home of Frank Knox, prominently named as a presidential possibility. Another proposal is that St. Louis, Mo., be the meeting place. St. Louis, it is argued, would be "neutral ground," since no Missouri Republican has been projected for the Presidency.

Other developments around the country in Republican ranks, some reported by the Associated Press, were:

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher and other officers of the Republican national committee met in New York and outlined plans for a Nation-wide drive for funds.

Chicago Republicans launched a militant drive to obtain 500,000 signed cards pledging opposition to President Roosevelt and Gov. Henry Horner.

Former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, in an address at Bowdoin College, flayed "New Deal" policies, contending they led toward Fascism or Communism, with death to economic freedom and ultimately to democratic institutions.

Call for Third Party.

In addition to these developments, Republicans and Democrats alike showed keen interest in the attack of Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia on the Roosevelt Administration and his contention that the times called for a third party. This incident gave color to speculation that Georgia—Mr. Roosevelt's "other home"—next year may be found supporting Senator Huey P. Long, the Louisiana "Kingfish," Senator Long and Gov. Talmadge have developed a political friendship.

White came to Washington to attend the annual meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, but he had not been here more than several hours before he was deep in a political discussion. Although disclaiming any hand in arranging the Midwestern meeting or any desire to play any part in it, he heartily indorsed the idea of regional Republican meetings.

In a talk before the editors, White said he was interested in the reaction of the Eastern press to the jaunt across the country recently completed by former President Herbert Hoover. Hoover, in some quarters, has been credited with inspiring the regional meetings. In other quarters this has been denied. But White seemed to think that nothing Hoover can do would affect his destiny.

"Either he will remain an impossibility or become inevitable," he asserted. "If he becomes inevitable he will be on the first page with emotional headlines. The Hoover curve may be an upward curve. It could not quite be a downward curve. It may be a straight line."

Subsequently, White said, he had no connection with the proposed meeting at Kansas City. Asked if he had not been selected to write a "platform" to be adopted by the rally, the Sage of Emporia replied: "I wouldn't try to write a Republican platform for $1,000 a word."

White, summarizing the situation, contended none knows what Republicans, as an aggregate whole, think. It is a new day with new issues, he contended. This "mechanistic civilization is no longer a going concern," he added.

"What do Republicans think of the challenge this collapse makes to democratic institutions?" he continued. "What remedies have they to offer? What are they going to do about it? Are they going to fritter away their chance to escape from the ruins by merely looking back, like Lot's wife? Are they going to attack and make faces and let it go at that?"

"Disease Not Diagnosed."

The answer to those questions, he added, may be developed in the proposed regional meetings. For that reason he favored them. But he was sure that "no one will pretend that these Rooseveltian court-plasters, liniments, massages and psychic shots in the arm are basic cures of a disease which has not even been diagnosed."

"Some real thinking is needed in this country," he asserted, adding that "this is dead sure—when any real thinking is done politically in this country, the Republicans will do it."

According to the Associated Press, officers of the Republican national committee decided to open their drive for funds immediately in five of the wealthiest States. If it succeeds it will be carried to the entire country. The States selected were New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio and New Jersey. The drive in New York City will start Monday, with the goal set at $250,000, to be divided equally among the national, State and county committees.

Still Runners Are Sentenced At Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., April 18.—Judge William C. Coleman, in the United States District Court, today sentenced and fined three men who had pleaded guilty to charges of operating a still near Ellicott City and possession of more than 7,000 gallons of whisky mash on which the Federal tax had not been paid.

Those sentenced were Roy Jones, 3 years in the Lewisburg (Pa.) Penitentiary and $500 and costs; Charles Cumberland, 18 months in the Chillicothe (Ohio) Reformatory and $500 and costs, and Basil E. Johnson, 3 years in the Lewisburg Penitentiary and $500 and costs.

The men, all residents of Ellicott City, were arrested January 2 when Federal agents raided a Howard County farm.

According to T. Warren Rice, assistant district attorney who prosecuted the case, Johnson was indicted recently with 33 other men by the District of Columbia grand jury on charges of conspiring to smuggle tax-unpaid liquor into Washington.

The indictment charged 2,000 overt acts and stated 180,000 gallons of tax unpaid whisky already had been smuggled into Washington. Johnson was described as one of the "key men" in the ring.

the twins were about to slash a chocolate cake to ribbons (and subsequently get it all over themselves).

"You took my picture before I cut it, you dope," said Jimmy calmly. Johnny, his educated brother, didn't say a word, being practically buried up to his head and arms in the cake at the moment.

A flashlight bulb flickered again as Mrs. Woods was wiping chocolate smears from Jimmy's face which he didn't like very much, either—the wiping or the photographing. "Don't take my picture while my mother is washing my face," he said sternly.

The twins' mother, who brought up five other children without assistance from the psychologists, simply had to give the two lads a facial going-over by this time because their faces were practically disguised by large liquid splotches of chocolate frosting and there was no telling them apart.

The other little man, who'd had a busy day, then demonstrated how much he was enjoying his party by falling asleep. They woke Johnny long enough to ask him what he wanted to do when he grew up and he said he wanted to be a policeman.

Then the precocious youngster began to jump up and down on a reporter's overcoat, at which time the press made its reluctant reparture.

Johnny and Jimmy came in for higher education because they were born at the medical center. Scientists suggested the experimental training, and their family, not in the best of circumstances, consented.

The party today was a big success, but as for what it proved—that was more difficult to say. One conclusion might have been that you only get out of college what you put into it.

Lippman Sees Effect Of Hoover Policy

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 18.—Walter Lippman, author and former newspaper editor, told a distinguished group at a luncheon in his honor today that the foundation for reopening the private capital market was laid by former President Hoover and is beginning now to take effect.

"It is possible to do a good deal at home," he said after asserting that recovery depends upon resumption of private investment and revival of foreign trade, "but not everything, by reopening the private capital market. The foundation was laid by Mr. Hoover in his cheap money policy way back in 1931-1932, and is only beginning to take effect, but it is taking effect in that the rate of interest is falling and therefore the Government and private corporations are able to refund outstanding debts at a lower rate of interest.

"Then comes the investment in new enterprise. That has not begun yet, but normally it always takes six months to a year for new investments to come."

Mellon Case Halts As Lawyers Confer

Board Will Resume Tax Hearing on Monday.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 18.—The Board of Tax Appeals today adjourned its hearing of the $3,089,000 A. W. Mellon 1931 income tax case until Monday, after attorneys on both sides agreed to work together over the week-end in efforts to reach stipulation to speed up the procedure.

While Robert H. Jackson, chief counsel for the Government, and Frank J. Hogan, Mellon's attorney, are conferring regarding introduction of more than 200 exhibits marked for identification, other members of the two staffs will be working on stipulations in the highly technical McClintic-Marshall-Bethlehem Steel transaction.

Hogan won a ruling just before adjournment that halted efforts of Fred R. Shearer, Government counsel, to delve into records of the Union Trust Co. regarding its disposition of $8,200,000 in Bethlehem bonds, part of the $21,000,000 in securities which Mellon and the three other McClintic-Marshall stockholders received from Bethlehem.

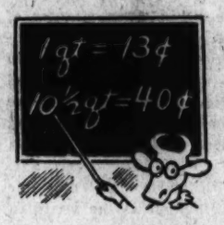
When 2 + 2 Isn't 4



THE farmer has to receive different prices for his milk.
He receives his highest price for milk sold in a bottle.
This price generally ranges from 4 to 7 cents a quart; in Washington it is 7 cents plus a quart.
The farmer receives lower prices for the rest of his milk that the public doesn't use in bottles, depending upon the selling price of the products into which it is made.
Butter is an object lesson in the rule of price. It takes about 10½ quarts of milk to make a pound. With butter retailing at 40 cents, say, the price of a quart of milk used for butter is obviously limited.
What the farmer gets is not what the milkman might like to pay. It all rests with the public . . . what people are willing to pay for butter, for cheese and other milk products.
The costs of raw materials cannot be more than the final selling price of any product.
This is a law of business the centuries have not changed. Scientists may question the law of gravity . . . a straight line may become a curve . . . but 6 cents of cost and a five-cent selling price won't keep a business going.
The milkman enjoys no immunity to the laws of economics.
Income must exceed outgo or he ceases to be liquid.
No business that pays out more than it takes in will long be in position to pay anything, to serve anybody.
The milkman must know arithmetic as well as milk.

A Useless Project.

The proposal to take a census of the unemployed at a cost of from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 is listed as the first step toward formulating the definitive work-relief program. President Roosevelt rightly emphasizes the importance of knowing how many people are out of work before proceeding with mass-employment measures. However, this essential information calls for a system of registering the unemployed through some such competent agency as the United States Employment Service. A single census would not even provide an adequate starting point for the acquisition of reliable information. Its findings would be out of date before they could be assembled and analyzed.

Moreover, the average "white collar" worker knows nothing of the technique required to obtain comprehensive and exact data on employment. How is he to distinguish between employable idle and unemployables? How shall he classify innumerable puzzling borderline cases? And what assurance is provided that the canvass will or can be thorough? It is certain in advance that a census of unemployed made by untrained men who are themselves on relief rolls would be worse than useless to the authorities. As a basis of strategy, no information is better than that which is totally unreliable.

Yet the President is proposing to spend upon this enterprise several times the amount of the annual appropriation allotted to the United States Employment Service. That organization registered and classified over 12,600,000 persons during the past fiscal year, and found positions for nearly 7,000,000 of them. It provides a starting point for developing a system of employment exchanges comparable to those found in Great Britain and other industrialized countries. Only through such agencies is it possible to keep a constant check upon the number unemployed from day to day and week to week.

Registration, if made prerequisite to payment of relief benefits, would assure a virtually complete and continuously accurate count of the idle, and also enable the Government to detect malingering. Incidentally, by using $12,000,000 or $15,000,000 to expand the United States Employment Service, it would be possible to provide more qualified unemployed with permanent jobs than would find temporary employment in undertaking the useless census which is now seriously proposed.

Cakes Within The Law.

Henri Charpentier, world-famous chef, has just been evicted from his restaurant in Rockefeller Center for nonpayment of rent. Officers of the law confiscated three birthday cakes which had been made for parties scheduled to take place that night. But in spite of this, Henri still believes that life begins at 56 because he retains possession of his recipe for crepes suzette, which he devised in Monte Carlo for the Prince of Wales, who later became Edward VII.

Henri is a sterling example of the contention that cooks are born and not made. There is a sort of divine intuition by which the born cook is guided, and it is worth all the recipe books on the market. An unmeasured dash "of this" and a little bit "of that" marks the line where the amateur leaves off and the chef begins.

Cooking is, and has always been, one of the most controversial subjects in the world. There are two schools of epicureans. One is made up of those loyalists whose memory of the way "mother used to bake" has never been dimmed by wifely efforts to cultivate fastidious appetites. On the other side are those whose palates respond only to novel or foreign gastronomic triumphs. Waffles, fried chicken and biscuits float on the banners of the first camp. Succulent souffles, enchilados and lucine papillons form the crest of the opposing gourmand.

But there is one common ground on which the gourmet and the lover of "home talent" must, perforce, admit they agree. And that is on the sacred inviolability of a birthday cake. Whether it be a simple, homey little affair made with three eggs and a drop of vanilla, or a fondant confusion of swirls and flowers, is immaterial. The fact remains that a birthday cake is as personal as a faded wedding bouquet or an old leather chair.

The picture of Henri unceremoniously escorted to the street, still in his chef's cap and coat, is a sorry one. But to the true epicure, that pathetic sight will fade into insignificance beside the one of those three resplendent culinary concoctions being borne off to jail by uninitiated and unappreciative officers of the law.

A Strange Compromise.

Senator Harrison's bonus bill has been offered to Congress as a compromise. In point of costs to the Government it occupies middle ground between the Patman inflationary measure, passed by the House, and the desire of the Administration to see all bonus legislation postponed at this time. Close examination of the measure will show, however, that the bill would virtually scrap the existing bonus act in favor of an entirely new policy.

Most of the bonus bills which Congress has considered in the last few years merely provide for payment of the veterans' endowment insurance policies before their date of maturity. They differ chiefly in the methods by which they propose to make such payments and to raise the necessary funds. In sharp contrast to that trend, Senator Harrison has devised a new basis on which to calculate extra compensation for service during the war. He would discard the bonus law enacted by Congress more than ten years ago, thus opening the entire question to more controversy.

Since the endowment insurance policies, miscalled the bonus, were not issued until 1925, Congress added 25 per cent to their value to compensate veterans for the delay in recognizing their claims. Senator Harrison would eliminate this extra sum, and give the veterans the amount of their adjusted-service credits with interest compounded from November 11, 1918, instead of only from 1925. This change would make a $1,000 certificate worth $1,115 in 1945, if it should be held unimpaired until that date.

Moreover, the Senator would permit veterans to exchange their unencumbered insurance for bonds bearing 3 per cent interest. Former soldiers in need of cash presumably would be able to offer these bonds at their current value. If all veterans took advantage of these provisions an estimated outlay of $1,300,000,000 would be required, and the ultimate cost of the bonus would be increased about $500,000,000 above the sum contemplated by the present law.

From the legislative viewpoint, the chief defect in the measure is its complexity. It is not an amendment, but an entirely new bonus law. It further contains a declaration of policy intended to forbid extension of the bonus into pensions. Senator Harrison says in effect: We ought to tear up the bonus act and write another law, but no other Congress should follow our example.

Mr. Patman's bitter denunciation of the Harrison bill strengthens hope that the broad differences between the House and Senate bonus factions will result in a stalemate. Otherwise responsibility for arresting this demoralizing surrender to a highly organized lobby will fall squarely upon the President. For the present, however, his responsibility will be pleasantly overshadowed by the noisy clash of faction which this unexpected intervention is bound to arouse.

By Way Of Recommendation.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has taken another step, and a very important one, in developing its system of regulation for the stock exchanges. It has issued a list of rules designed to restrict the transactions of floor traders and eliminate various abuses that were revealed in the course of the Senate inquiry which preceded passage of the regulatory act. Following its practice in previous instances, the S. E. C. has issued these rules in the form of "recommendations," leaving some discretion to the various exchanges in interpreting them.

The aim is to provide for a measure of flexibility in administering rules which, it is admitted, are to a large degree experimental. Responsibility for enforcement also devolves upon the exchanges while the commission is determining how well the rules are observed and how they work.

While this method of procedure may not change in any substantial respect the substance of the regulatory requirements, it undoubtedly elicits more effective cooperation from those concerned. Moreover, by stressing the experimental character of the rules, premature criticism is discouraged and a better test of workability is assured.

The Forgotten Plan.

If Commissioner Allen ever writes his memoirs, or even fills out a line-a-day diary, he may well record his interview of Wednesday under the heading of "Life's Darkest Moment." For the Commissioner was then suddenly catapulted into national distinction by a brain child which, apparently, he did not recognize.

Reporters almost flew to the District Building after the President announced that the local Commissioner had worked out a plan admirably fitted to serve as a guide in the expenditure of work-relief funds. But their clamor for the details of this ideal scheme merely left Mr. Allen bewildered. Frankly he confessed that he had no plan.

It is true that he sent a memorandum to the White House, but . . . since that time he has devised many plans. Plans are his specialty. Presumably, however, Mr. Allen does not expect all of them to be taken seriously. At any rate, he appears to have been somewhat bewildered when he discovered that his casual ideas on work relief were to become a guiding light in the President's plan to spend $4,880,000,000.

To observers who have closely followed the course of the work-relief experiment, however, White House adoption of the forgotten plan occasioned little surprise. The Administration has "planned" this $4,880,000,000 spending program as if it were an impromptu picnic. Plans have been picked up hither and yon with a cheery assumption that eventually they will all fit together into a coordinated enterprise capable of lifting the country out of depression. Indeed there is only one agency whose plans do not seem to be given consideration. And that is the former National Planning Board.

Tact In The Air.

It is generally difficult for an American unfamiliar with conditions beyond his own borders to understand the thought processes of a foreign nation. In the face of ardent declarations of a desire for peace, Europe in particular proceeds to arm itself to the teeth. Neither illogic or any inborn inclination to dissemble, but simple geography, accounts for a large part of this apparent contradiction.

Our nearly self-sufficient country is bounded on the north and south by two sparsely peopled nations which we need never fear. To the east and west of us stretch vast oceans. The serenity induced by this fortunate location unfortunately can not be enjoyed by all the world. On the contrary, suspicion and irritation are engendered by the very proximity in which other peoples live. Because this powerful and confident nation has no comparable apprehensions, it is all the more necessary, when we go afield, that we bear in mind the nervous tension habitual to others.

Yesterday the United States thrilled to the accounts of a giant air clipper, making the flight from California to Hawaii so perfectly as to land within three minutes of its scheduled time. It marks a further advance in the conquest of the air. Human ingenuity chalks up another credit, and vistas of intercontinental transportation are opened up. But note the article appearing on the page opposite from our Manila correspondent.

Japan views with alarm this new air service. Regarding herself as the guardian of the Orient, she ponders the war-time significance of an air lane leading close by her southern possessions. Already made nervous by the plans for United States naval games in the northern Pacific, Tokyo's reactions may be gauged by newspaper headlines which scream of "America's Concealed Military Power in the Pacific."

Fatuous as such interpretations may appear to this country, they are not altogether unjustifiable. If it had been the other way about and Japan had first opened the air route by flying eastward, the reaction not only on the West Coast but throughout the breadth of this country can be easily imagined. The professional jingoists would have converted a million disciples overnight.

So it behooves us to exercise the greatest tact in the new Pacific venture. In our ingenuous enthusiasm for progress, all precautions must be taken to tread carefully in a world oversusceptible to sudden jealousies and hair-trigger suspicions.

If I Were King.

Perhaps the first real practical use for a king has just been discovered. And credit for the idea does not go to any of the sage monarchs of Europe, but to the youngest of them all—9-year-old Ananda Mahdiol of Siam. Although his coronation does not take place until a future date, it is apparent that he is already practicing up on his royal prerogatives. This week he chose to exercise them to have himself released from an especially difficult examination. On top of that, he had himself promoted to "classical college" without benefit of quiz.

There will probably be two schools of thought on the wisdom of the Siam sovereign's action. There is not much doubt that it will make him unpopular with his schoolmates. For while they are staring blankly at sheets of unfilled test paper, Ananda will be out riding the royal bicycle or sailing the Lake of Geneva. And it will only be natural for them to wonder if he intends to use kingly influence to have himself elected captain of the school teams or designated as the boy "most likely to succeed" after leaving college.

On the other hand, Ananda's subjects might be pleased to regard this bit of political strategy as indicative of the human side of their new monarch. Perhaps the lack of such homely "even-as-you-and-I" gestures accounts for the unpopularity of kings today. And it is safe to say that there is no great statesman, whether in Siam or elsewhere, who did not wish at some time or other during his scholastic life that he might be ruler just for a day so that he could declare a moratorium on examinations.

Beginning A Neutrality Program.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The curbing of munition makers' intrigues and the development of plans for taking the profit out of war are matters of great importance. Chairman Nye, of the Senate Munitions Committee, which is investigating these two vital subjects, has not lost sight of another of equal or greater moment—the maintenance of American neutrality in time of war. Senator Nye has announced he is ready to offer tentative bills with this objective. In a recent address at Lexington, Ky., he outlined his views on the laws necessary to keep America at peace. These include, he said, an embargo on all shipments of munitions to belligerents, drastic restriction of travel by Americans in the trouble zone and a bar on flotation in this country of any public or private loan destined for the warring nations or any of their citizens.

These proposals provide a good basis for beginning discussion on this essential policy. The methods of safeguarding our neutrality are still undetermined, and the time to determine them is before it is necessary to use them.

Sharecroppers' Distress.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a daily reader of The Post, I learn of cotton restrictions, cotton import and export problems and processing taxes, of mill owners and cotton growers descending upon Washington to see about their rights and profits.

But never can I find mention of the poor devils who actually grow the American cotton crop and pick it, who are known to a handful of informed persons as sharecroppers. They are human beings more concerned with a way to live and the right to live than with world markets in cotton. They are struggling amidst conditions of dire poverty and constant exploitation by the landowners, and because they seek to better these conditions, they are being terrorized inhumanly. Receiving from $2 to $4 a week for themselves and their families as their entire income, they have learned that their condition can be made even worse. For no just reason, for reasons pertaining only to the selfish interests and brutality of the ruling planters they are thrown out of their miserable shacks and left homeless to face an unsympathetic world in any way they can.

Our comfortable citizenry shudders with horror at stories of Hitler's concentration camps, but the few who have been told authoritatively about the distressing conditions of these sharecroppers in Arkansas and other Southern States actually became sick. As American readers of American newspapers we call upon the press to bring these conditions before the public eye, and to exert sufficient pressure to arouse our Government to act, not to investigate. Investigation has already been conducted and the resulting report quashed because of its horrible revelations. We must wipe out this condition of slavery, in spite of the aristocrats of the South. Unjustified Slur.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The New Deal spokesman, Dr. Ezekiel, whom I personally admire, tells a scientific society that there is an abundance for all and that the academic gentry of the Federal Government could distribute that abundance if the so-called selfish interests would do away with the profit motive. The gist of his theme is that all the industries should forget all profits and losses and should produce and turn the cash proceeds, when there are any, over to the Federal spenders.

As a much harassed small business man, I am not so much concerned with the fallacies of the New Deal as I am with the epithets and slurs that these gentlemen cast at us. All I do is work, worry and pay taxes and I am willing to turn over my selfish business any time for an unselfish Government job. If the theorists think I would continue business without any idea of profit, they are badly mistaken. Without that hope, I would join the Government dependents or, if lucky, get a Government position and tell others how to run business.

It is downright silly to pretend that all our business people are selfish, avaricious and greedy. We are those who have made America what it is, and these academic fellows are only spending what we make. It is equally silly to pretend that when a man joins the growing Government forces he acquires all the qualities of angels. The good and bad qualities are operating in Government bureaus as they are elsewhere. There ought to be an end to this campaign of slander against everyone who does not happen to depend upon the Government pay roll.

TIRED BUSINESS MAN.

Profits In Wartime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May one unskilled in legislative magic ask how, if Congress kills war profits, this country expects to get supplies in time of war? Remodeling factories to meet the demands of war contracts is both expensive and risky. This risk is not lessened by the fact that if the war suddenly ends and the Government cancels these contracts without payment, as it has been known to do, the owner will be left again to remodel at his own expense to a peace-time basis.

In the last war the need of huge quantities of war supplies was so urgent that our Government, so far from attempting to draft capital, did not even attempt to draft labor. The British government had the greatest difficulty in getting its manufacturers to take a very much less drastic step than that of staking great sums of stockholders' money without the slightest prospect of adequate corresponding profit. In "Mirrors of Downing Street," Lloyd George is quoted in an eloquent plea for the pooling of trade secrets. "Don't think of your trade secrets. Think of your brothers, of your sons, being killed in thousands, by German guns for want of British guns. Give me those guns."

Unless our zeal for the purification of business is so great that we are willing, as we actually did in the case of the air-mail contracts, to sacrifice lives in our effort, our soldiers must go into action properly equipped and we must allow the incentive of profits as still necessary in order to get them their equipment on the spot and in proper quantity. As for reform of abuses in the ammunition business, as for removing the rotten spots in the war supply apple, there must be better ways of doing this than by cutting down and destroying the trees upon which we must depend for our fruit.

FRANK CIST.

Washington, April 14.

For A Universal Draft.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am reading daily in your good paper about war profits and how to prevent them. The munitions manufacturers seem to be the point of argument in every article.

May we forget the munitions manufacturer for the moment and consider other classes of activity which were quite common during the past war. I refer to those who were awarded contracts to construct our camps. They had no investments in plants. They had not built and developed a factory, which takes years and much money to do. They had no stock in trade and they risked nothing.

They did receive a Government contract to construct a camp. On the strength of these contracts they were given credit by those who furnished the material, and regardless of the cost they were assured their profit because the contract stated "cost plus 10 per cent." They could not lose, and they invested nothing.

Everyone connected with the last war, except those of us who were in the service, made a profit, and their profit was guaranteed. The Government guaranteed us nothing, and we even had to pay for our own insurance out of our monthly pay. If another war should come, everyone should be drafted and put on a pay basis of $1 per day and made to like it, as those who did their part in the armed forces were made to do. ALBERT G. CLARK.

Silver "Rigging."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A "shot" of silver in the national arm has been applied just as people throughout the land, enveloped in dust, disaster and doldrums, were about to throw up the sponge. Already this new and novel "shot" has aroused sleepy speculators from their protracted doze, and the wheel of Wall street is revolving again; not much speed as yet, but it may be ripe for a whirl. "Inflation" is in the air.

Conservative people are eyeing the bright silver bunny, hopping so merrily about at this Easter season, with considerable misgivings. It is somewhat difficult for them to explain the strange functioning of administrative minds that sponsor a stupendous speculation in silver while creating laws to regulate and suppress this identical desire, so prevalent in Wall street.

To minds that happen to be analytical, the marking up of silver closely resembles the "rigging of stocks" through pool manipulation (now prohibited). Indeed, it seems to be a case of "heads I (Uncle Sam) win, tails you (John Public) lose." E. K. G.

Dab For Damn.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a transplanted inhabitant of the deep South, I wish to correct your report of verbal exchanges between Secretary Ickes and Huey Long.

You report Long as having said, "He can go slap damn to hell." The expression should be "He can go slap dab to hell." This is a common expression in Huey's part of the country. In this period of spring colds it is probably excusable that a reporter should mistake the word dab for damn.

"And the Stately Ships Go On."

One by one the great liners start on their last voyage of the scrap heap. The latest reported victim is the Olympic, sister ship of the ill-fated Titanic, a favorite for many years. That she was to be withdrawn for the time from the transatlantic service was known; she is already announced for cruises from English ports. As in the case of the Mauretania, however, this appears to be the beginning of the end.

Still capable of a much longer life, the Olympic can not compete with those monsters of speed and luxury, the Queen Mary and the Normandie. The demand for accommodations of this kind is limited at best. When the new ships cross every week in four days, other great liners than the Olympic may disappear from the ocean. The cruise business seems to be flourishing, but, after all, there is a limit to the tonnage it can absorb. There is a good deal of waste in modern progress.

The Post Impressionist

"Going For A Soldier."

Post Office, Friday.

NOW that the Students' Strike Against War has had its day in the court of the editorial columns, some sensitive opponents of militarism are reviving the old cry against those parents who give toy soldiers to their children. "The fanciful fighters become, in imagination, real fighters, and the real fighters become ideals." Such is the gist of the criticism.

This Column wonders if the critics go deep enough to reach the real cause of the love for toy-soldiering.

And this Column wonders whether even the deepest criticism would have any effect.

Not only do most small boys seem "naturally" to like games about war. Most small boys, and most small girls, seem to like games about death in every form.

A while ago in London, a benefi-cent gentleman passed a group of poor children at play. Barefoot, ragged, amid dire surroundings, they were singing lustily some song the words of which struck them as so humorous that laughter frequently chocked the music.

The good gentleman stopped to discover what could bring merriment to those pinched faces, those poverty stricken souls. And this is the refrain he heard:

"Oh, mother is dead, and father is drunk
And we're hungry and cold and half-dead!"

The observer was shocked. He remained not to hear any more of the ditty. He ran away and wrote to the papers about it.

And it seems he didn't say that here was a somewhat sad, though unconsciously ironic, echo from the background of those little lives. He seems to have said simply that no children ought to be allowed to sing such songs. He seems to have missed the fact that the background bred the song and to have declared that the song brutalized the singers.

Imagine, then, how much more profound his shock must have become when the superintendent of a great orphanage completed the ballad by a stanza describing the mother's funeral!

"Our girls," said he, "love it. You can't think how it makes them laugh."

Indeed, somebody else contributed another song allegedly popular among the young of Limehouse—a song that, he averred, never fails of "laughter and applause" and consists of the many times repeated couplet:

"Cold meat—mutton pies;
Tell me when your mother dies!"

Of course, as the London Times points out, the enjoyment of some such songs, and of the games that generally accompany them, "is not confined to poor children. What happy family of many children with a garden has not revelled in the funeral of some pet bird?" Games about death are, like death itself in Hamlet's epigram, common.

The division lies elsewhere. "The difference is that, while well-to-do children know very little at first-hand of the death and burial of human beings, the children who live and play in the crowded streets know them well.

"Lacking the artificial enrichment of feeling which books and music bring into sheltered lives, the children of the pavement, like their elders, find their amusement and their interest" center chiefly upon "the ceaseless pageant of common life, in which death and burial make up one of the most exciting episodes. Their enjoyment is not morbid. Their savoring of it over again in play is not likely to make them callous."

It strikes the Post-Impressionist that there are elements in this statement which might be applied as analogy in the argument upon toy-soldiers as war-breeders.

We certainly don't care for Congressman McSwain's demand that little lads "now playing with toys" should immediately begin training to run bombing-planes. But we certainly don't object to their toys being toy soldiers.

The making of militarists has no more efficacious helpers than the too zealous opponents of militarism, both the pessimists among them and the optimists.

We have heard of maiden aunts who smash all the toy troops in a nephew's nursery: such are the pessimistic pacifists.

And we know of a superbly optimistic teacher in Trenton, N. J., who—having asked the value of the Aleutian Isles and been told that they were excellent naval and aircraft bases—declared: "Not in these days, for there is never going to be another war!"

We venture to guess that, of men now grown who played with toy-soldiers before they were men, almost as many have passed their lives, thus far, in the pursuits of peace as in the profession of strife. The late Marshal Foch probably didn't play with tin-soldiers. The late Archbishop of Canterbury as probably did.

Besides which, if it hadn't been for a tin-soldier, Eugene Field would never have written his best piece of verse—

No: we mean his best poem.

Japanese Enter Race By Air To Philippines

Fearful Of American Designs, Nippon Rushes Plans To Compete With U. S. And Holland.

By Vincente Albano Pacis.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila (By Mail).

WHEN the Pan-American Airways' plan for a San Francisco-Manila-Canton line began to take more definite shape with the issuance of official permits by the Navy for the use of Guam, Midway and Wake as wayports, Japan suddenly took alarm, launched a vitriolic attack on the American project. Announcement has also been made of two air projects from Tokyo to Formosa and to Palau Island, southernmost of the former German islands situated about 500 miles east of Davao.

Thus, Japan, who regards herself as the guardian of the Orient, has virtually entered the air race to Manila between the Pan-American Airways and the KNILM, the well-established Amsterdam-Sourabaya Dutch Line, both of which have tentatively calculated inauguration of their Manila extension next July. While Japan ostensibly is not interested in reaching the Philippines, both Formosa and Palau are just a short jump away. In fact, as Davao is a veritable Japanese colony in the Philippines and virtually forms the southern end of what Japan calls her ocean life-line, the extension of the Japanese line to Davao may well be taken for granted as highly desirable in Tokyo.

As a matter of fact, it is generally believed that Japan's sudden outburst of alarm at the Pacific air activities of the Pan-American is due to the fact that the projected San Francisco-Manila airline will pierce the Japanese life-line drawn along the mandated islands east of the Philippines. Writing in one of the Tokyo newspapers recently, Admiral Norumasa Suetsugu, commander of the Yokosuka naval base, discussed the mandated islands.

* * * *

"A DEFENSE line on water," he wrote, "far from being a physical thing, can not always be designated in black and white. It is a different story, however, if a nation has a peculiar geographical feature all its own. Then the nation knows it has something by which to safeguard the homeland, something by which to check an attack. It is largely for this reason that the mandated Pacific islands are regarded as Japan's first-line marine defense or Japan's ocean-life line . . . As long as Japan is able to hold these isles, she may rest assured that her national safety is secured . . . Besides, these isles are naturally built aircraft carriers and would afford the enemy squadrons ideal places from which to operate . . . These islands are apparently made to order for Japan . . . That is why Japan under no circumstances can relinquish the isles . . . Japan is under no obligation to return the islands."

Thus, the Japanese naturally regard an American line passing regularly over these islands to and from Manila as an intrusion, if not a destruction, of the natural strategic value of the mandated islands to the Japanese Empire. Hence, the following newspaper headlines in the vernacular Japanese press of March 13 and 14:

"America's concealed military power in the Pacific."

* * * *

THEN, apparently reverting to the old Japanese strategy that action and not words count for more, the Japanese stopped their press attack and began to work on an airline to the mandated islands, in all its aspects an answer to what they regard as an American challenge.

It is pertinent to state in this connection that on the occasion of the arrival of the Dutch royal squadron that undertook a trial flight from Sourabaya to Manila only on the eighth of this month, the Japanese Consul General in Manila was asked by the Manila press if Japan had any plans to blaze an airline toward this direction. In reply, he declared emphatically that there was no Japanese plan of the sort, except, perhaps, a line to Formosa. From the way he talked the projected line to the mandated islands was never even thought of.

The Philippines has long regarded with some alarm Japanese activities in the mandated islands. To reports that they are being fortified, however, the Japanese have always replied that the reports were false. But today, spurred by the United States, Japan is preparing its isles as airports—perhaps as military airports. If the Japanese press imputes military designs behind the Pan-American project, there should be a greater likelihood of Japan fortifying its mandates, since it is the ministry of communications of the empire itself that is undertaking the project.

* * * *

MEANWHILE, the Philippines wonder what a fortified Japanese ocean life-line means. For the Japanese life-line cuts it off from the United States and places it in the virtual category of Japanese territory within its first line of defense and offense. In fact, the article already referred to enigmatically concluded:

"The independence of the Philippines will always bear vitally on Japan's national defense. If the islands are granted full independence the problem will be simplified . . . If America washes her hands of the Philippines, as the rest of the world hopes, the islands' door may be opened to ambitious young men from neighboring countries, particularly from Japan, for further developing the untapped resources of the islands . . ."

Who is this?
This is grandpa.
What is grandpa doing?
Grandpa is taking his first look at his newly arrived grandson, Sylvester.
He is crying.
Who, the grandchild?
No, grandpa.

* * * *

What is the matter with the grandchild?
Nothing.
Is Little Sylvester normal and healthy?
Yes, Little Sylvester is normal and healthy in every respect.
In fact the boy is a perfect specimen.
Doesn't grandpa like grandchildren?
Yes, indeed; grandpa has always been fond of grandchildren.

* * * *

How long has grandpa been crying?
Ever since he heard Little Sylvester had arrived.
What on earth is the reason?
That is what Little Sylvester's mamma and daddy wondered at first.
Did grandpa tell them why he wept so much?
Yes.

* * * *

What did he say?
He said he couldn't help weeping at the thought of what his little grandchild faced in the future?
"It's too bad! Oh, it's just too bad!" grandpa kept sobbing.
"What's too bad?" the baby's parents demanded, quite puzzled.
"All those bills," sobbed grandpa. "All those overwhelming debts and liabilities."

* * * *

"What debts and liabilities?" asked Little Sylvester's daddy.
"AAA, NRA, FERA, ERB, TERA, FOB, BCB and all that," sobbed grandpa.
"We don't get you" explained Little Sylvester's mother.
"All those one, two, three, four and five-billion-dollar projects," said grandpa. "All these housing campaigns, reclamation undertakings, grade crossing eliminations, reforestation projects and new breakwater plans."
"How do they effect your little grandchild, a babe in arms?" asked daddy.
"He'll be the fellow who will have to pay for 'em," cried grandpa."

Afternoon of a Baseball Colonel.

The Yankees, they were scoreless,
They toppled, one by one;
Then came the news from Boston:
"Bambino Scores a Run!"

The Colonel, cold and somber,
Watched empty innings flee,
And winced at further tidings:
"Babe on a Batting Spree!"

He seemed to stand it bravely . . .
Then swooned upon the spot,
As came the much-feared tidings:
"Ruth Poles One Out of Lot!"

The polo shirt workers have won the forty-hour week. The news that polo shirts are being made in America again would seem some indication that the worst is over.

Albermarle County Cuts General Tax Rate 16%

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 18.—Albemarle County's board of supervisors, at its April meeting, formally approved a 16 2-3 per cent cut in the general tax rate and adopted a budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The budget calls for an expenditure of $82,310.09 from the general fund and $251,970 from the school fund.

Along The Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

Keen Disappointment.

EVEN if the Nye committee should succeed in taking the profits out of war it will carry a disappointment to its grave. It's strange, too. One would think that a group of men who accomplished such a laudable, high-minded objective as this would be tickled pink, that they would throw out their chests and think "What wonderful men we are!"

BARGERON.

But they won't. The joy that should be theirs will be tinged with a bitter defeat. The more the Senators consider the ease with which Barney Baruch got away from them, the more bitter becomes this defeat. It's ruined their disposition. It is something they simply can't get over, and, wrack their brains as they will there seems to be nothing they can do about it. The man appeared before the committee and got away unscathed. They had not intended this. It was not in their plans at all. As they look back over what happened they think they must be getting old and losing their stride.

* * * *

The purpose was to smear Barney. Just why the smearing of him was looked upon as a concomitant to eliminating profits from war is not very well understood. But it was so looked upon by the committee. The gentlemen had been licking their chops for several weeks in anticipation of getting at him. He was to be the best meat since the committee ate 'em alive last summer.

Instead, Barney appeared, took the committee by surprise with his agreeableness and went on his way. The committee, when it realized what had been done to it, barked feebly once or twice and then sat on its haunches looking so aggrieved as almost to touch one's heart.

One can better appreciate the committee's feeling when it is realized it is one of the very few ever to be done this way. Smearing committees usually get their man by hook or crook. To be outsmarted as this one was causes it to lose caste. When it succeeds in eliminating the profits from war there will be fellow Senators to congratulate it perfunctorily, of course, but on all sides there will be the realization that it failed in one of its major purposes. The Senate, being constituted as it is these days, may possibly direct the committee to go back and bring in a more "complete" report. Because a report providing simply for the elimination of war profits at telling nothing about the smearing of Barney will not be the well rounded-out thing that was sought.

* * * *

Barney undoubtedly knew what was in store for him. His strategy very probably was planned by Herbert Bayard Swope who appeared with him. Anyway, when Barney showed up the committee was amazed to find that Barney agreed with it. He "yessed" the committee members out of their wits.

And by the way, he said, there was the matter of his income during the war years. He had heard the reports circulated by the committee that no record of his tax returns could be found for those years. Strange, said Barney. Very strange, indeed. Well, there need be no more mystery about the returns. Here was the whole record, right here for the committee to see.

* * * *

The committee was flabbergasted. At no point could it find anything to warrant a pillory. It grinned rather sheepishly and let Barney go on his way.

Subsequently, from New York, Barney wrote the committee and said that in as much as the committee had asked his views on war profits there should be no misunderstanding of them. For one thing he considered the bill prepared by the writer, Mr. Flynn, and of which the committee is enamored, just about the worst thing that could be prepared.

Well, sir, you could have knocked the committee over with a feather. Now if he had just said this before the committee it could have painted him as a big war profiteer, a dangerous man in every respect. But as it was it could only bark.

You would think his real views were all the committee wanted and that it would appreciate the later statement. But you see, primarily the committee wanted to take Barney for a ride. And he outsmarted the boys.

No End of Books

Anniversary Edition of Clifford Beers' Famous Descent Into Insanity and Return.

By Theodore Hall.

WHEN Clifford W. Beers, 30-odd years ago, lay in the six by ten cell of a State asylum violent ward, he conceived in his insanity a brilliant idea. Man had always struggled with the idea of lifting oneself, literally, with one's bootstraps. If, now, he could tear up the felt mats into strips, tie them around the bed and from transom to barred window in a complicated harness, then he had only to pull on them and up he would go. He did this, and he and the bed dangled in space. "My sensations at this momentous instant must have been much like those which thrilled Newton . . . So epoch-making did this discovery appear to me that I noted the exact position of the bed, so that a wondering posterity might ever afterward view and revere the exact spot" where a man had defied gravity.

But posterity might have a better reason for viewing certain cubicles and cells in Connecticut insane asylums. For there, at the turn of the century, Mr. Beers spent 798 days of madness—and lived to recover completely, to set down his experiences at length, and found and foster the American Mental Hygiene Movement.

It was the Frenchman, Pinel, who, back in the time of the Commune and the guillotine, first had the notion of treating insanity with kindness. Yet how little the idea penetrated, at least to any wide practice, can be seen in the tortured and revolting sections of Mr. Beers' great book, "A Mind That Found Itself" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50, profits to the American Foundation of Mental Hygiene).

* * * *

SLUGGED and beaten, left in unheated cells in winter with no clothing but underwear, crushed for as much as 15 hours at a time in the straight-jacket (you can't move a finger for hours after you get out), Mr. Beers knew at first and cruel hand the methods with which we used to treat our mentally sick. If there has been any change for the better since 1903, it is due to the resolve he made on his release that he would hang on like grim death to a program for reform.

For, deepest flick of the knife, his reason had returned a long while before he was dealt with as anything else but a violent case. There was time to see his own state, and that of his fellow patients, all too clearly; time for that momentum of resolve to grow.

William James said of this autobiography: "It reads like fiction, but it is not fiction; and this I state emphatically, knowing how prone the unitiated are to doubt the truthfulness of descriptions of abnormal mental processes." And here, as a sample, is what is to my mind the most moving passage in the book.

* * * *

"I HAVE already described the peculiar sensation which assailed me when, in June, 1900, I lost my reason. At that time my brain felt as though pricked by a million needles at white heat. On this August 30, 1902, shortly after largely regaining my reason, I had another most distinct sensation in the brain. It started under my brow and gradually spread until the entire surface was affected. The throes of a dying reason had been torture. The sensations felt as my dead reason was reborn were delightful. It seemed as though the refreshing breath of some kind of Goddess of Wisdom were being gently blown against the surface of my brain. It was a sensation not unlike that produced by a menthol pencil rubbed ever so gently over a fevered brow. So delicate, so crisp and exhilarating was it that words fail me in my attempt to describe it. Few, if any, experiences can be more delightful. If the exhaltation produced by some drugs is anything like it, I can easily understand how and why certain pernicious habits enslave those who contract them. For me, however, this experience was liberation, not enslavement."

No new book, "A Mind That Found Itself" came out first in 1908. It has sold steadily ever since, without any formal advertising; this edition is the twenty-second. Called the "Twenty-Fifth Anniversary Edition," to celebrate the founding of the Mental Hygiene Movement, it marks the great strides forward which the care of the insane has taken.

And though a biting and deeply revealing book in its own right, it is still pertinent. One in twenty among us, they say, sees at some time in his or her life the inside of an insane asylum after visiting hours are over.

* * * *

EVERY once in a while the old awe comes over me at the variety of books which reach this desk. Here, from Dr. Morris Siegel, is "Constructive Eugenics and Rational Marriage" (McClelland & Stewart, Toronto, $2.50)—hinged on the thoroughly tenable point that "love at first sight" is responsible for another generation. The good doctor objects strongly. But somehow one does not swallow the book, especially when one finds a sentence like this (stressing the genius-producing power of the masses): "The actors in Hollywood represent the finest specimens of men and women endowed with beauty and art, gift and charm." My sacred aunt!

Next is "Insurance and Annuities: From the Buyer's Point of View" (American Institute for Economic Research, Cambridge, Mass., $2.50). The authors, E. C. Harwood and B. H. Francis, explain patiently all those misty matters of insurance, point out that the same protection will cost 10 per cent more in one company than in another, and urge a thorough investigation. Valuable data, I should say. No names are mentioned, but the institute will analyze your problems for a fee.

Carl Van Doren's "What Is American Literature?" (Morrow, $1) is a brief and readable summary of our national letters. Cool, but true sentence: "In literature the first writers are first and the rest, in the long run, nowhere but in anthologies." Mr. Van Doren picks his winners, and there'll be practically no disputing.

A gold medal to Dent in London and Dutton in New York for their "New Temple Shakespeare." Here, in vest-pocket volumes nicely printed and bound, and handsomely decorated by Eric Gill, are the plays and poems at 65 cents a volume. Forty will complete the series. There are notes and glossaries, but, as M. R. Ridley, the editor, says: "The object is to give the maximum of Shakespeare and the minimum of himself or any other editor." I fell in love—don't tell Dr. Siegel—with the series at first sight.

Good Friday

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

THE day before Good Friday is Maundy Thursday, when humility is observed by the washing of the feet of the poor by eminent persons. The word maundy here is from the word commandment, or in mandate, which comes from the Latin. In St. John's Gospel we read "A new commandment give I unto you," which in Latin is mandatum novum do vorbis.

The origin of the word Good Friday is probably God's Friday, kept all over the world as the anniversary of the crucifixion.

* * * *

The Anglo-Saxons and Danes called it Long Friday possibly because of the length of the church service—but might it not have been because of the prolonged suffering on the cross?

In Germany it is called Charfreitag (see Parsifal) and while no one knows for certain the etymology of the word char, it may be from old high German chara, which means suffering.

From earliest Christian times it seems to have been observed as a day of fasting; since the fourth century the Eucharist has not been observed on Good Friday. There was a time in Spain when the churches were closed on that day as a sign of mourning. In Catholic churches for many centuries the altar and the officiating clergy have been clothed in black, the only day in the year when this is done.

The three hours service, from 12 to 3, originally observed only in Catholic churches, is now very commonly observed in nearly all the Protestant denominations.

Two Counties Name Judges In Spelling Bee

Total of 208 Schools Are Enrolled in Regional Competition.

Shenandoah and Loudoun counties, both with large enrollments in the National Spelling Bee, are the first to complete arrangements for their county matches to the last detail, including the naming of judges and pronouncers. Both these counties will charge 5 cents admission to their bees, for the benefit of their own county libraries.

In the Loudoun County match, the judging committee, which looks up disputed spellings and settles any fine points that may arise, will include Mrs. J. H. Emerick, Purcellville; Mrs. Mabel N. Lybolt, Purcellville; E. O. Russell, Leesburg, and M. B. Costello, Leesburg. The pronouncers will be Mrs. Margaret G. Cockerill, North Fork, and Miss Bertha Gruver, Purcellville. The match will be held in the Leesburg High School Saturday May 4, at 2 p. m. Schools will send two spellers each, with the exception of Leesburg, which will have four.

Time Changed.

The hour of the Shenandoah County match, in Woodstock High School, Saturday, May 4, has been changed to 2 p. m. This has been done at the suggestion of C. V. Shoemaker, superintendent, because of the condition of the school grounds and country roads. It will be easier to handle the crowd in the afternoon, and a large attendance is expected. Each school in this county will be allowed to send one delegate. Schools have been advised by Shoemaker not to select their champions until May 3, so that all pupils will have the advantage of studying steadily for the county match. In this way, the object of the bee, to increase interest in the study of spelling, will be best served.

Judges in the Shenandoah match include the Rev. Arthur Wake, Strasburg; the Rev. John H. Massie, Edinburg, and W. C. Hobson, New Market. The Rev. Jonathan Edwards will pronounce the words.

The date of the Albemarle County match, already announced, has been changed to meet the convenience of school authorities in that county. Albemarle contestants were asked to await further notice as to the date on which it is to be held.

Schools Enrolled.

Schools which enrolled yesterday, with the name of the principal or teacher in charge, are:

Loudoun County—Philamont, Mrs. Frances S. Mayse.

Warren County—Harmony Hollow, Miss Effie Moore.

Page County—Battle Creek, Mrs. Mable I. Miller.

St. Marys County—Laurel Grove, Miss Mazie McG. Clemson.

This brings the number of schools enrolled to 208, and as entries are still being accepted the total is expected to exceed 300.

Inquiries or entries should be addressed to Alice Fox Pitts, Spelling Bee Director, The Washington Post.

International Police Hold Security Hopes

British Group Indorses Proposal, Believing Disarmament Depends on Enforced Peace.

By Viscount Duncannon.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Surprise has been aroused by the British decision to support the Franco-Russian policy of sanctions against nations which repudiated their treaty obligations. The growth of British sentiment for an "international police force" to insure the sanctity of treaties is examined below by Viscount Duncannon, whose father, the Earl of Bessborough, is Governor General of Canada.

London.

DURING the last feverish month Germany has at last come out into the open, and the situation in Europe is undoubtedly clarified. It does not seem that Germany has the material support of any country in the wold at the moment. Not unless Japan should ally with her in a practical way could there be any very serious outcome to the present situation. This is not, however, a time for any country in Europe to lie low or to follow out a nationally selfish policy of isolation. The more European nations that combine, in order to achieve some kind of collective security, the better.

Theories for collective security are not, therefore, impertinent at the moment. And the fact that there is a growing society in England (with adequate support of the press) which has as its aim the promoting of international law and order—and in particular an international police force and tribunal—is in itself significant.

Although this "New Commonwealth" movement may have no desire to be associated with a very young journalist such as myself, I do not feel that its leaders will grudge this little publicity. However, it is not with the New Commonwealth program that I wish to deal, but rather with one or two ideas concerning an international police force which have not, perhaps, had the publicity they deserve.

* * * *

AN international police force really implies the solution of the problem of peace and disarmament through the eventual abolition of private (i. e., national) forces. Everyone must face that fact, and although the following schemes must be worked out rationally and without haste, the long-range outcome of the situation must be the abolition not of regional forces but definitely of private armies. When we consider the international police force, we must think of it in terms of sanctions, organized in such a way as to contribute eventually to disarmament and the organization of peace.

Attempts at an all-round reduction of national armaments have been positively checked, and are not likely to be revived in the near future. Actually, disarmament can only succeed a system of enforced peace such as appears to be the British policy at present.

Great Britain's immediate problem is the preservation of peace, and Europe as a whole needs a breathing space in which to deal with the causes of war. The organization of sanctions in the form of an international force should be able to contribute to the preservation of the truce. For instance, if an aggressor nation violated the frontiers of another country, economic sanctions (in the form of trade barriers, etc.) could be backed up by strong interceptor forces—preferably a regional international air force.

* * * *

THE Anglo-Saxon conception of the League of Nations has been hitherto purely one of consultation and persuasion. Unanimity is the aid. Disarmament has been regarded as the prelude to security instead of being the epilogue. The French look at it in opposite fashion. Organized security must precede disarmament. There was one concession to this in Article 16 of the covenant.

Unfortunately, the failure of the disarmament conference has proved the practical falsity of the Anglo-Saxon conception. France has not trusted England to fulfill her obligations under the Locarno pact. And if pacts of mutual assistance were sufficient in themselves, the peace of the world would already be assured. But apparently these promises are not always reliable. In some way the commitments of each party must be made practically binding. Therefore it seems that the organization of sanctions in the form of international forces is about the only alternative to another war.

A world police force is obviously unattainable at the moment. All that can be hoped for is the creation of a number of international forces supplementary to regional pacts of guarantee. The Nazis have failed to obtain a two-thirds majority in the "Free City" of Danzig, which seems to imply that the League of Nations has greater control over it than was thought. While the league has still some prestige, there is hope, even if schemes for an international police force entail drastic reorganizations at Geneva.

THE international force which policed the Sarr election may have been the small beginning of the working out of these ideas, and historians may some day consider the Anglo-French air pact to have been the actual germ of a future international air force. Let it be said, however, that an international police force is not an exclusive of complete solution. The development of education and many other forms of contact must also play their part in the promotion of international law and order.

An eminent Englishman, who has probably influenced more prime ministers than any other man, once told me that he did not believe that sanctions were in themselves feasible. I can not agree that they are impossible. Surely if promises are to be in any way binding between countries, there must be some form of compulsion—especially between countries which are democratic and may change their minds when a new government comes into power.

History has proved that unenforced promises are useless. Mutual recognition between countries that their pacts are irrefutably binding would, after all, insure peace.

If the people realized that their countries must keep their promises, there would be no opposition to an international police force. Force, coupled with education, is the only way to insure that promises will be kept and peace permanently preserved.

House to Probe Foreign Trade With Japanese

Ways and MeansCommittee Votes Survey Despite Hull's Warning.

A threat to the Administration's foreign-trade policy was seen yesterday in a decision by the House Ways and Means Committee to take up next week the whole question of increased foreign imports, particularly textile competition from Japan.

This action was agreed to on motion by Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, as a protest came from Secretary of State Cordell Hull against efforts "to stampede this Government into unnecessary and unwise action against Japanese competition."

In a letter to Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee, the Cabinet member declared "the relations between the two countries are friendly, and it is to the unquestioned advantage of both countries to maintain relations on this basis."

Japan's Trade Prized.

He added that "sentimentality" plays no part in this attitude, since "last year we sold to Japan nearly twice as much as we imported from Japan—$209,865,596, as compared with $118,007,087." Japan, Mr. Hull pointed out, is this country's best customer for raw cotton.

It is the products made from this American cotton, paradoxically, which are now being imported in increasing quantities and are responsible for the raging controversy. The dispute continued yesterday at both ends of Pennsylvania avenue and on the radio last night.

The Administration is committed, under its trade bargaining program, to a lowering of tariff barriers. Steps to prevent unusually rapid increases in imports may sometimes be advisable, Mr. Hull said, but at the same time he warned that more imports must be admitted if the United States is to continue its foreign trade.

"The value of our exports over our imports last year amounted to nearly $500,000,000," the Secretary said. "That excess was balanced, speaking in general terms, by our heavy imports of gold, but this situation can not continue indefinitely. We must import more if we are to maintain even the present volume of exports."

While welcoming President Roosevelt's action in ordering a Federal Traiff Commission investigation of imports of bleached cotton cloth, the congressional textile bloc indicated plainly that it is not satisfied. Members pointed out that considerable time will elapse before Japanese goods can be shut out, under this procedure.

A delegation of 15 New England representatives called on Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, who assured them of the Administration's interest. Also present at the conference were Secretaries Hull and Henry A. Wallace, who, as head of the Agriculture Department, has been constantly forced to defend the cotton-processing tax.

Presidential Committee Advised.

The upshot of the meeting was a resolution recommending the appointment by President Roosevelt of a Cabinet committee "to consider what measures should be taken to relieve the present emergency and to make long-term plans for meeting the conditions of the industry." Those attending the conference were:

Representatives William P. Connery, John W. McCormack, William J. Granfield, Arthur D. Healey, Joseph E. Casey, Richard M. Russell and John P. Higgins, of Massachusetts; William R. Rogers, of New Hampshire; Simon M. Hamlin and Edward C. Moran, of Maine; John M. O'Connell, of Rhode Island; William M. Citron, James A. Shanley, J. Joseph Smith and Herman P. Kopplemann, of Connecticut.

Meantime, both Wallace and Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, took to the radio last night to defend and attack, respectively, the New Deal's farm program.

Wallace pleaded for an understanding between consumers and farmers. He also criticized the attacks by middlemen on the proposed amendments to strengthen the AAA.

U. S. Again Protests Oriental Monopoly

By the Associated Press.

The United States yesterday made a renewed effort intended, informed quarters said, to keep the slowly closing "open door" in the Far East from shutting on all American exports from Manchukuo.

Acting under instructions from Secretary Hull, Ambassador Joseph C. Grew lodged a fresh protest with the Japanese government against the establishment of an oil monopoly in the Japanese-backed empire to the detriment of American oil companies operating there.

Phillips said that Ambassador Grew had been instructed to reiterate previous American protests against the monopoly as in violation of treaty obligations and to call attention to promises by Japan and Manchukuo to maintain the "open door."

While the protests lodged by the United States, Great Britain and The Netherlands have been specifically against the oil monopoly, it is understood that all three nations consider the prevention of the spread of monopolistic practices into other products as the vital principle involved.

U. S. on Verge of Boom In Ocean, Expert Says

New York, April 18 (AP).—America was described today as being "on the threshold of a new era in world trade" by Malcolm M. Stewart, Cincinnati, chairman of the Middle West foreign trade committee, in his address before the National Council of American Shipbuilders.

"Despite tariffs, trade restrictions and that distinctly modern weapon —'economic nationalism'"—said Stewart, "the foreign commerce of the United States is rapidly approaching the normal level."

Last Plea for Kentuckian Fails; Attacker to Hang at Dawn

Governor Refuses to Stop Execution of Youth Scheduled Today.

By the Associated Press.

Smithland, Ky., April 18.—Denied executive clemency today, William De Boe, 23, of Paducah, Ky., convicted of criminally attacking the wife of a storekeeper, will be hanged in the jail yard here at dawn tomorrow.

He will be the first white man hanged in Kentucky in a generation under the State law providing hanging as the penalty for a statutory offense. The execution automatically fell on Good Friday when the State Court of Appeals five weeks ago denied De Boe's petition for a rehearing.

"I am sorry, but there is nothing I can do," Gov. Ruby Laffon said at Frankfort while De Boe's sister, Margaret, waited outside to plead for him. The governor telegraphed De Boe's attorney here that he had studied the case and decided not to intercede.

G. Phil Hanna, professional hangman who has adjusted the noose about 68 throats, brought from Illinois the same iron trap door that dropped Frank Berger, southern Illinois gangster, to his death eight years ago.

The 600 inhabitants of Smithland prepared to handle a crowd of several thousand expected to arrive during the night. There will be 50 official witnesses selected by Sheriff G. H. Heater, but the board quadrangle about the scaffold will not obstruct the view from adjacent slopes.

De Boe and Ezra Davenport, 20, of Okemah, Okla., who is serving a 20-year prison term as an accessory in the attack on the storekeeper's wife during a robbery, were captured at Dyersburg, Tenn. De Boe was accused of two other criminal attacks and a series of robberies.

Choice Offered Wanderbirds This Week-End

By Robert Shosteck.

Members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club will have a choice of two afternoon trips this week-end—a hike to the Terra Cotta clay banks, kilns and fossil beds on Saturday, and a scenic jaunt along Difficult and Scott runs on Sunday. The 7-mile trip from Terra Cotta to Takoma, mostly along the Northwest Branch, will include a visit to the famous St. Gaudens statue in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Those planning to go on the Saturday hike should meet at 2 p. m. in front of The Post Building, from which place buses will take the group to the entrance to Rock Creek Cemetery, where the trip begins. The round trip fare will be 20 cents. Telephone in your reservations to National 4200. Club members and others planning to go on the 5-mile trek along the scenic trails of the upper Potomac should meet in front of The Post Building at 2 p. m. Sunday, to board buses for Difficult Run Bridge, the starting point of the hike. The round trip fare for this trip will be 50 cents, and reservations must be made in advance at National 4200. Bring lunch and a cup.

St. Gaudens famous Adams Memorial in Rock Creek Cemetery will be the first stop on the Saturday itinerary. This veiled female figure in bronze, erected in 1890, is considered a masterpiece of sculpture and has become known as the "Statue of Grief." Under a carpet of pine needles are interred Mr. and Mrs. Henry Adams. This world-famous monument, visited by thousands annually, stands in a secluded corner of the cemetery.

To Visit Civil War Stronghold.

From the cemetery the group will proceed along Allison street to Fort Totten, a Civil War fortification overlooking the Baltimore & Ohio tracks and Brookland. The trail continues downhill to the great clay and gravel pits which contain large quantities of fossil cypress-like wood of the Cretaceous period. Many of these splinters and branches are encased in a limonite shell. Across the railroad tracks, the hikers will inspect the kilns and the plant in which much of Washington's clay pipe is made. Nearby is a large iron ore bed where one can find specimens of interesting concretions. Dr. Ulke will explain the origin of these.

The trail leads over a grassy hillside past an Indian workshop for about one mile to the first stopping place, a house built in a treetop, with a spring nearby. The route follows the crest of the hill to Sargent road, thence to the Northwest Branch, about one-half mile beyond. A good trail follows the gorge of the Northwest Branch for a distance of three miles to Takoma Park, where the buses will await the group.

Numerous Flowers on Trail.

Dr. Ulke, who will lead the trip along Difficult Run, looks forward to finding about 50 varieties of spring flowers in bloom along the route. The group will follow the trail down this run, crossing over at the falls and continuing in the direction of Black Pond. If permission is obtained, the group will continue along the Palisade Trail to Mr. Lynn's cabin on Bullneck Run, and then on to Scott Run and Mr. Scott's house on the hill. The buses will meet the group at Swink's Mill, returning to the city by 7 p. m.

The Red Triangle Outing Club meets Sunday at 2 p. m. at Fifteenth street and Constitution avenue for a trip above Great Falls, Md. An evening party at the clubhouse is planned after the hike. Henry George, Georgia 2176, will lead this trip.

The Department of Agriculture Hiking Club will take an afternoon trip up Cabin John Run on Sunday, starting from Cabin John Bridge at 3 p. m. Scores of varieties of spring flowers will be seen on this scenic three-mile trip. R. O. Gustafson will lead. All Department of Agriculture employes are invited.

Many hikers will be interested in the movie on "How and Why of Bird Banding," to be shown by Dr. F. C. Lincoln before the Biological Society Saturday at 8:15 p. m. in the auditorium of the Cosmos Club. Dr. S. F. Blake will likewise give an illustrated talk on the autumn flowers of the District of Columbia, describing their habitats and variety.

'The Best Dog Is'—English Sheep Dog

He's a Fine House Watcher, Has a Playful, Friendly Disposition, Says Mrs. Pembroke Jones, and His Unusual, Shaggy Coat Lends Distinction.

The finest and the most spectacular creature of the canine world, is the way in which Mrs. Pembroke Jones, of 3100 Cleveland avenue, describes her pet—a beautiful, shaggy-coated English sheepdog.

"He couldn't be nicer," Mrs. Jones declared as she discussed Toggie, otherwise known as Clifford Knight Errant, with a Post reporter. "He is an excellent watch dog. Frequently hearing the doorbell or the telephone when we don't and letting us know about it. Whenever he meets another dog, he acts like a pup instead of a 7-year-old and wants to play. He will never start a fight, but he can stick up for himself if he runs into trouble."

No Rumble Seater.

Despite the fact that Toggie holds a big place in the affections of the Jones family, Mrs. Jones confessed they were hunting for a good home for their pet. "We travel a lot and Toggie is so big that we can't just put him in the car. We took him on a trip last summer, putting him in the rumble seat. He suffered with his coat, terribly, from the heat. When we stopped to cool him off, he climbed in front and nothing would budge him. The result was that I had to ride in the rumble seat for the rest of the journey. If we leave him at home, he gets terribly lonely. Our man comes during the day, but goes home at night and the neighbors have told us that Toggie would whimper about the house like a baby."

Even with his beautiful fur coat, Toggie minds the cold, according to his mistress. "He really needs more exercise than we can give him. We should have a large estate for him to run over. I can't imagine giving Toggie up, but it really doesn't seem fair to go off and leave him alone so much of the time and not to give him the necessary exercise.

In Good Condition.

Toggie is in the pink of condition and is as beautiful a sheepdog as this writer has come across in her long association with the kennel world. His blue and white coat is free from knots or mattiness, due to the daily grooming he receives.

An old English sheepdog is a rare sight anywhere, but once this dog, standing 22 inches or so from the ground, is seen, it can never be forgotten, nor its ambling, bearish walk. The outstanding characteristic is the profuse, shaggy coat of gray, grizzle, blue or blue merled with or without white markings. The eyes, beneath shaggy hair, are dark, although the most coveted among breeders are dogs with one wall eye and one dark brown eye. The skull is large, rather squarely formed, the whole well covered with hair. The nose is always black and large, while the ears are small and carried flat to the side of the head. The tail is minus, either naturally or by docking. The whole appearance of the old English sheepdog is for rugged compactness.

NEWS TRAVELS FAST in the nation's capital.

Whenever Government officials make a decision, millions of people want to know what it is.

There's a Government decision about gasoline, for instance, that made thousands of motorists stop and think.

It's this: Gasoline for the Government's emergency duty must pass a more rigid set of specifications than that for ordinary use.

IF YOU EVER DROVE an ambulance, you'd know why Government buyers demand a faster-starting, more powerful gasoline for their emergency vehicles.

But you don't have to be an ambulance driver to get a gasoline like that!

You can buy it all of the time... and without extra cost... at any Texaco Fire-Chief pump.

Texaco Fire-Chief gasoline has been matched against the Government's higher, emergency specifications.

It more than meets the Government requirements for use in ambulances and fire-engines.

TEXACO FIRE-CHIEF

When you buy at this pump you will be getting, at no extra cost, a gasoline that more than meets the Government's requirements* for fire-engines and ambulances

SEAGRAM'S is smoother. And there are two big reasons why. First, Seagram's enormous stocks of rich blending whiskey. Second, Seagram's three-quarters of a century's experience in distilling fine whiskey. Crown Whiskey is actually "custom-made" to American taste—that's why more people buy Seagram's Crown than any other brand. At home, serve Seagram's. Away from home, say, "Make mine with Seagram's." Say Seagram's and be Sure.

Mabel Jackson Heads Artists At Napoleon's

By Kay Ware.

The newest addition to the restaurant line-up is Napoleon's, 2629 Connecticut avenue. In rooms muraled with Flemish paintir gs and on cream-colored leather chairs you can enjoy varied viands, cocktails and wines. The atmosphere is at once smart and intimate.

Entertainment features Mabel Jackson, who (remember the radio?) was the original Mary Lou of the Showboat productions. This week she features "One Night of Love," "When I Grow Too Old to Dream" and "I Was Lucky." There's a musical ensemble, too. Ann Arlen, violinist; Peggy Hurdle, pianist, and Dick Sweeney, saxophonist. The two girls are also vocalists and were known to air patrons as the "Dairy Maids" some time ago.

If you want a glimpse of a diplomat, drop in any time from noon to 2 a. m. If you want a swank dinner for two, drop in anyway.

Best news of the week—Hi-Hat's Paradise Islanders are sick unto silence of "Isle of Capri." The other night they played it 20 times between 9:30 and midnight. Some one suggested that the Hawaiians themselves might be the inspiration for the requests, but any around-town troupe will tell you they are just as sick of the tune. Next in demand at Hi-Hat is "When I Grow Too Old to Dream."

If you haven't heard Gordon St. Chad, the leader, send his deep voice way down, get him to render "Asleep in the Deep." Or ask for native Hawaiian songs. They're really lovely.

Bunch of Atlantans, headed by John C. Thompson, William I. Lawson, Miss Sally Mathews and Joseph Hanlein, turned up the other night.

Spent a swell half-hour watching Mel Christopher fuss with a deck of cards at Heigh-Ho. Get him to do the one where you look at a card, turn it face down on the table, hold it tightly with your finger and peek at it presently, only to discover it isn't the same card.

Blonde Dorothy Skinner, in a blue gown all bursting with white ruffles, has a huskiness in her voice that makes you remember the letters you should have written to the one and only.

Try a Ramon's special sandwich—a delectable combination of grilled ham and Swiss cheese, all done up between slices of French toast. And smile at Ramon when you eat it.

Childs' Gingham Club gets a new show, headlined by Dot Rozelle, a piano specialist who has been borrowed from radio. Then Brett and Young, the dance team, offer novelty and specialty numbers; Wynn Snader, the modernistic dancer, is said to do some dancing with a fan.

Regulars include Jimmy Santmeyer and orchestra, Mary Jo Hamilton, of the golden voice, and Sammy Richardson, another golden voice. There are four shows on Saturdays, three on other days. Sunday is Mammy night, with much old-time Southern atmosphere, best appreciated with chicken and waffles.

Club Habana is going glamorous—so they say. One look at the bright doors, one listen at Moe Baer's smooth music, one stop for a dinner and a show, and you'll understand the adjective. Meanwhile, the "Zatros," with Eddie Brach continue to hold up the statement that "Three's Not a Crowd." Other features—Jimmy Bright's guitar, Ralph Hawkins' stick work, Moe Baer's violin and Sebastian's liquid concoctions.

La Paree celebrates the season with a "Fantasy at Easter," calling for special arrangements by Maestro Daugherty, more fine work by blonde Kitty Wagner, and a whole new set of costumes. If you want to find out more about it, ask Marie Fowler and Ray Beck, who have a few more Easter surprises to go along with the show.

Lotus rumors to the effect that there'll be Easter doings up there. Something to do with the chorus and bunnies, though we aren't sure.

Some mysterious admirer has asked Judy Ellington to sing "Melancholy Baby," not once but many times. So, to please him and a few other admirers, she will feature it in the show this week. Nice song, nice singer.

Line-up at the Shoreham: Eddie Collis, English M. C. and singer; Zanett and Margo, with a "refined Cuban dansant;" Eileen Healy with rhythm taps, fast buck and hot-cha. Dancing in the lounge from 4:30 to 7 with Barnee's Orchestra.

"Daphne's Debut," the show which will be given in the ballroom of the Mayflower Tuesday and Wednesday, will have Sidney's Orchestra to play its music. Today there will be concert music appropriate to Good Friday in the lounge.

Public Will Be Jury In Corcoran Art Show

An opportunity to serve as an art jury will be given the public next week when the Corcoran Art Gallery will hold a referendum of visitors to determine the most popular picture in the fourteenth Biennial Exhibition of Contemporary American Oil Paintings.

A prize of $200 will go to the artist whose picture polls the largest number of votes, C. Powell Minnigerode, director, announced yesterday. The "election" will last all week.

Four of the paintings already have been selected for the W. A. Clark prizes, totaling $5,000, by a jury of noted artists, headed by Jonas Lie, of New York.

Minister Sentenced for Speeding.

Charged with fourth-offense speed, Elmer F. Robertson, a taxi driver of the 1400 block of V street northwest, was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 or serve 25 days in jail by Traffic Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday.

2 Railroad Men In Bus Tragedy Free in $1,000

Letter on Death Crossing Sent Roosevelt by Rockville Board.

James A. Shewbridge, engineer, and W. F. Bussey, fireman, of the Baltimore & Ohio express that crashed into a bus, killing 14 Williamsport Md.) High School students, at Rockville a week ago, came voluntarily to Rockville yesterday, where they were formally charged with manslaughter in connection with the fatal collision.

Both enginemen were released immediately under $1,000 bond each. They will be given a hearing here Tuesday. They were accompanied by William F. Prettyman, Baltimore & Ohio counsel, a representative of the Fidelity Casualty Insurance Co. and Clarence Norriss, trainmaster of the Baltimore division of the B. & O.

Meanwhile the Montgomery County commissioners addressed a letter to President Roosevelt, calling his attention to a statement, following the accident, that he would do everything possible to end the menace at the grade crossing. The commissioners asked funds to help in this work. They assured the President that they would co-operate in every way.

Another letter was addressed to the B. & O., calling attention to an old law about having the crossing guarded, and pressing the point that they wished the deadly crossing eliminated.

Boy, 15, Sentenced For Acid Maiming

Pretty Divorcee Disfigured, May Lose One Eye.

By the Associated Press.

Tulsa, Okla., April 18.—Marquis Clute, 15, was ordered committed to the State training school at Paul's Valley today for throwing acid in the face of Mrs. Leah Webb, pretty divorcee, Tuesday.

With no outward show of emotion, the youth, his face and hands marked with acid burns, repeated in court today the confession he had made previously to police—"I did it to get $20."

In the county jail, unable to make $3,000 bond, was Lamont Webb, 20, former husband of the disfigured woman. Clute said Webb offered him the money to throw the acid. Webb, a novelty salesman, pleaded not guilty this afternoon upon arraignment in common pleas court on a mayhem charge.

Mrs. Webb, 19, left the hospital today. Doctors said they did not know yet whether she will lose the sight of one eye. Her face is marked for life by the acid.

Court Holiday Causes NRA Case Continuance

Because of the impossibility of concluding hearings on a dispute between L. Greif & Bro., clothing manufacturers, and the National Labor Relations Board and the National Recovery Administration before the Easter holidays of the District Supreme Court, Justice James M. Proctor yesterday continued to May 6 a rule issued on the Government agencies requiring them to show cause why they should not be restrained from taking away the company's Blue Eagle. Hearing on the rule was scheduled for yesterday.

A labor dispute at the Staunton (Va.) plant, in which a small group of union employes was locked out by a larger group of nonunion employes precipitated the trouble.

Forced Landing Kills Army Flier in Texas

Taylor, Tex., April 18 (AP).—Lieut. Paul Boyer Wilson, of March Field, Calif., was thrown from his plane and killed today as he sought to land in a plowed field.

Lieut. Wilson, on a cross-country flight from March Field to Barksdale, La., flew over Taylor and then turned back, apparently seeking a place to land. Persons who saw the crash said the ship "spun like a top" as the pilot tried to bring it down.

George Abell Divorced By Reno Court Decree

Reno, Nev., April 18 (AP).—Mrs. Luvie Moore Abell won a divorce on grounds of cruelty here today from George Abell, Washington, D. C., columnist. District Judge Thomas F. Moran granted the decree at a private trial.

They were married in Lausanne, Switzerland, January 16, 1930, and have one child, Tyler.

Reilly Demands Bruno Fund Probe

Fears 'National Scandal' in Handling, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—Asserting he feared a "national scandal," Edward J. Reilly today urged the New Jersey State Bar Association to investigate the handling of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense fund.

C. Lloyd Fisher, who recently succeeded Reilly as Hauptmann's chief counsel, termed Reilly's letter to the bar association "the raving of a disgruntled and disappointed man."

The rotund Brooklyn lawyer charged his Flemington (N. J.) successor with "very unethical" conduct from the beginning of the case and said he believed the bar association "should look into the facts as to why there is no accounting or control of this defense fund." He estimated there was at least $37,000 in the fund.

Five Autos Collide at 13th and Avenue

One man injured and two cars demolished was the toll of a five-car accident at Thirteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest yesterday afternoon. The injured man was Arthur E. Vandergracht, 31, of the 2100 block of R street northwest, who was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations of the face and hands.

Other drivers involved were H. W. Steiger, of the 4600 block of Fifth street northwest; John D. Sadler, of Bethesda; R. M. Hall, of the 300 block of T street northeast, and Ernest H. Haynes, 23, of the 1300 block of Belmont street northwest. The accident occurred as a line of cars was starting at a traffic light.

Jury Names 12 Taken in Raids On Drug Count

Garnett Says U. S. Agents Told Him Traffic Here Was Extensive.

Twelve persons were indicted yesterday for alleged dope activity as an aftermath of raids conducted by the narcotic squad last March in a Nation-wide drive.

The 12 were named in nine indictments returned by the District grand jury yesterday. All were charged with violations of the Harrison narcotic act or the narcotic drugs import and export act. In presenting the cases to the jury, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett declared special Government agents had informed him there was an extensive traffic in dope in Washington.

Those indicted were Bessie Snow, 400 block of K street northwest; Thomas LaPage, no fixed address; Mosby Williams and Maw Lee, 900 block New York avenue northwest; Clay Nichols, 2100 block P street northwest; Russell V. Clayborne and Dorothy Tanner, both of 900 block Hamilton street northwest; Carl Belohlavek, 1700 block Q street northwest; Benjamin and Lucille Woolf, 1700 block Seventeenth street northwest; Charles Nader, 800 block Ninth street northwest, and Clyde C. Frank H. Acton and Reuben Rose, accused of taking $666 from Fred B. Harper, were indicted for robbery.

On the complaint of Mrs. Bertha M. Klein, 70 years old, Gottlieb C. Klein was indicted for nonsupport. Mrs. Klein, who lives at 3015 Sixteenth street northeast, claimed her husband, a retired Government employe, did not keep his promise to pay her $30 a month after a former indictment had been dropped.

Charged with stabbing Alfred Jordan, colored, to death, David Meadows was indicted for murder.

Other Indictments.

Other indictments were: Theodore Brown, joyriding; James Charles, James Jackson, Herman Walker, Herman Hawkins, Wiley Crouch, Alphonso Monros, Lawrence C. George Matthew Washington, violation section 100, title 18, U. S. Code; James W. Hart and Arthur E. Kennedy (two charges), abortion; David Meadows, first-degree murder.

Those whose cases were ignored by the grand jury were: Robert Melvin Lee, John Douglas and Solomon Temple, housebreaking; Virgil Rada, assault with a dangerous weapon; William H. Anderson, violation of the liquor taxing act of 1934; John Howard, violation of section 863, D. C. Code; Robert L. J. Carmody, false pretenses; Thomas T. Connelly, libel; Ellsworth Newman and Wilfred F. Jones, homicide.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Underneath the Broadway Moon.

I think that everybody indulged in a nice, pleasant grin when Babe Ruth belted that homer in the first game of the National League season. It is so seldom that Fate cuts the pattern that we wish in daily life, that this was doubly grateful. The whole country was standing at the plate with Ruth in his first game at Boston. We braced ourselves in fancy, everytime Hubbell wound up and poured one in. Hubbell was something more than a pitcher in that game. For the moment he was Father Time, and his "hard, high one," baseballese for a fast one, was the scythe that Father Time uses to cut down us puny mortals. Ruth represented every man, in every line of endeavor, who is standing off the frost of advancing years. It would have been a bit heart-breaking had Ruth struck out or fouled out. Each of us would have felt a pang of real disappointment, personal sense of discouragement. But along came Ruth and wacked a homer, and I imagine that even Fate, that scurvy rascal, joined in the Nation-wide applause.

Most discussed executive in the talking picture industry at the present moment is Darryl Zanuck, who has coined a fortune for Twentieth Century Pictures, Inc., in the past 24 months. When he came over to my table at the Central Park Casino last night, I was startled at his youthfulness. The dynamo of Hollywood is in his 30s. His blondness suggested that he was of English descent, but he tells me that his father was Swiss, and he himself was born on the Old Rosebud Indian Reservation at Wahoo, Nebr., Although there is no Indian blood in him, his first experience in flickers in 1910 cast him as an Indian squaw, of all things. His family had moved to Edendale, Calif., and with most of the kids of the neighborhood, young Zanuck spent all of his spare time watching the newly arrived Kalem Co. making pictures. The director needed a group of Indian children for a Western thriller. Zanuck was one of 20 selected. They gave him a black wig, a squaw's wig. But Zanuck never got into the picture. Bessie Barriscale, playing the lead, did not look right to the director when she arrived on the set with her blonde hair. They took the black wig from 9-year-old Zanuck, gave it to the leading lady to conceal her blondness, and chased Zanuck off the lot.

I asked him what picture had given him his greatest thrill: "I'd say it was 'Les Miserables,'" he said. "The reasons for selecting this one are: (1) The Victor Hugo story was in the public domain, so I got the story for nothing; (2) I borrowed Director Boleslawski from M.-G.-M.; (3) I borrowed Gregg Toland, one of the greatest of cameramen, from Sam Goldwyn; (4) I borrowed Charles Laughton from Alex Korda; (5) I got a loan of Rochelle Hudson from Fox; (6) I borrowed John Beal from RKO; (7) I borrowed Frances Drake from Paramount; (8) I asked for and got Cedric Hardwick, who plays the bishop, from Jock Whitney's company, Principal Pictures. With my story costing nothing at all, and with a borrowed cast, director and cameraman, the only thing I supplied was motive energy." I saw the picture last night. Fredric March in it becomes the No. 1 actor of the screen!

Dear Ed: Have your column in which you said: "Dick Powell forced Ted Fio Rito off that radio program because Powell didn't like the way the crack band played his music." I don't know where you got this information, Ed, but evidently it was given to you by some one with more malice than common sense. Ted left the program only because he had to be at the Edgewater Beach Hotel for the summer. I'm now doing a picture called "Broadway Gondolier," in which there was a spot for a name band. I insisted that the studio use Fio Rito. Don't think I would have done this if I hadn't liked him sincerely. This letter is not being written with the thought that you should apologize or retract, Ed. I merely feel that you and Ted and myself should agree on these facts, because it does seem to me that some one has been deliberately feeding the papers with malicious cracks, and for the life of me, I can't understand who is doing it or why. Just before Ted left the Coast, he gave me a gift which I'll always prize. Thanks very much for wading through this, and here's hoping you take it the way it's meant. Sincerely,

(Signed) DICK POWELL.

Garden Week Pilgrimages Are Awaited

Famous Capital and Virginia Homes on View Next Week.

Distinguished Women of D. C. and Alexandria to Receive.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

When spring comes everybody gets a garden fever of some kind, either to dig and plant a garden or to tour the beautiful and famous gardens of Georgetown, Chevy Chase or near-by Virginia.

Under the auspices of the Garden Club of Virginia a number of mansions, beautiful, historically interesting—or both—within easy distance of Washington, are to be open next week.

These houses of the past, homes of Virginia's cavaliers, planters, statesmen and soldiers, will open their hospitable doors for a week. There are ancient gardens, box walks, cowslip, iris and lilacs. The Potomac, the Rappahannock, the York and the James rivers flow past these lovely old homes with their Chippendale, Adams, Sheraton and Hepplewhite furniture. The old post roads stretch before them to the hills and valleys of the Blue Ridge, to the marshes of the tidewater.

Notables Will Receive.

Nearest to Washington are Gadsby's Tavern, in Alexandria; Wellington, Ordleigh, Hollin Hall, Woodlawn, Gunston Hall and Rippon Lodge.

A distinguished group of Washington and Alexandria hostesses will receive the visitors each day and tea will be served in the gardens on fine days, and indoors if there is rain.

If you were anybody from 1752 to 1842, at some time you ate at Gadsbys—for the finest to eat and the best to drink were procured there. There the King's birthday was celebrated, and later the first President's. There Gen. Washington recruited his first command and their bade farewell to his last. There he danced with the beautiful and charming Sally Cary Fairfax. All public occasions were celebrated there—and most official. It is full of history, romance, mystery, and just now full of a fine collection of furniture, from the earliest days of the colony to the grand period.

Wellington, built previous to 1760, was part of the Washington estate and the home of Fanny Bassett, niece of Mrs. Washington, and widow of George A. Washington. Her second husband was Tobias Lear, tutor of the Custis children, secretary and historian of Gen. Washington's last hours. In consideration of Lear's 14 years of service to the general, he was made tenant of the estate, rent free, until his death. The house, though much changed, is beautiful, and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, the present owner, has a garden that is the admiration and despair of envious visitors.

The home of Col. and Mrs. Orr, Ordleigh, is built on part of the Wellington estate and replaces an old frame house. The garden and river view are very fine.

Gunston Hall is described as "a small house standing on a plateau well back from the Potomac, quite self-centered and remote, but it easily takes rank with the famous houses of the world." Built in 1768 by George Mason, author of the Virginia Bill of Rights, the First Constitution of Virginia and one of the framers of the Constitution of the United States, it boasts some of the finest woodwork in the State. Mason, they say, was never happy when too far away to see the smoke from its chimneys, so much did he love its tranquility.

The colonial home of the Virginia Blackburns overlooks the mouth of Neabusco Creek. Built about 1727 by Richard Blackburn, of Rippong, England, it has given two daughters as mistresses of Mount Vernon. Bushrod Washington took there Anne Blackburn as its third mistress, and Jane Charlotte married John Augustine Washington. Today each rests at Mount Vernon. Richard, member of the General Assembly of Virginia from 1745-1747, died in 1757 (a few weeks before his friend, William Fairfax, who attended his funeral), and lies, first of his line, amid the tangled beauty of the old graveyard. Rippon Lodge is a gem of quaintness and the visitor to the house will find a charm and interest difficult to describe. Mr. Wade Ellis, the present owner, is a direct descendant of Richard Blackburn.

Woodlawn Overlooks Potomac.

Woodlawn, the home of Nellie Custis, is situated on the top of a hill overlooking broad acres and the Potomac River. The mansion was built between 1803 and 1805, on a 2,000-acre tract of land cut from the Mount Vernon estate, and given to Lawrence Lewis, Washington's nephew, at the time of his marriage to Nellie Custis, on February 22, 1799. The young Lewises lived at Mount Vernon until after Mrs. Washington's death, when they moved to Woodlawn. They maintained their new home with all the elegance and style of their times. Woodlawn has weathered the storms of time well. It has housed many distinguished owners and none more so than the late Senator Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, and Mrs. Underwood, the present owner.

Hollin Hall was planned and built by George Mason, of Gunston, for his third son, Thompson Mason. Completed in 1792, the house is described as having large columns and stone mantels from the home quarries, except in "the best room." This mantel Mason imported from England. The house was named for the English estate of Sir William Thompson, the ancestor of George Mason's mother, Ann Thompson Mason, daughter of William Mason, the Attorney General. She was said to be the greatest influence in his life, and Mason named his son for her.

Hollin Hall was destroyed by fire before the Civil War. Today the old spinning house across the road is all that remains of the original buildings. The late Mr. and Mrs. Harley Wilson built the present house, and during Mrs. Wilson's life the garden was one of the most beautiful in the State.

Salesgirl Says Motto "Customer Is Always Right" Excludes Women.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am going to broach a subject I have never seen mentioned in your column, yet one which affects me and thousands of other women as well. It is the way the average woman of means treats the shop girl who waits on her from behind the counter. Like "the dirt under her feet," is about the way to describe it.

• • • •

I guess it would be worth my job if the management which employs me knew I said it, but there is little or no truth in the average business man's policy that "the customer is always right." About 90 per cent of the time, if the customer is a woman, she's in the wrong, when finding fault with a saleswoman.

• • • •

And the woman of so-called social standing is nearly always the worst offender when it comes to insulting a saleswoman and making her feel she is one of nature's mistakes. The middle-class woman is usually good natured and willing to take the attitude that if something's wrong, it can be corrected with a little patience, and she's willing to discuss the matter and take her share of the blame. Her appearance may not be so fine, nor her accent so finished, but she proves she has some human feeling by taking it for granted others have feelings, too.

• • • •

The salesgirl's job is not an easy one at best, but it could be made a whole lot easier if some of these women who are so willing to dedicate themselves to causes "for the betterment of womankind" would just use a little more self-control, a little more of the Golden Rule, when transacting business in department stores.

• • • •

They seem to expect the whole world to drop back in awe when they approach a counter, and for the salesgirls to line up like slaves bearing gifts to a potentate of olden times, when they want to buy a dime's worth of safety pins.

• • • •

One thing they never seem to realize is that they, but for the grace of God, might be in the salesgirl's shoes. Certainly they're no better looking, usually little if any more intelligent, and not nearly so self-respecting. If they respected themselves, they'd just naturally give more respect to others, I would think.

Another thing—I wonder how many of these queens of democracy realize that behind the counters are dozens, yes, hundreds, maybe thousands of women just as well born and often as well educated as themselves. I don't suppose you'll print this letter, for I don't suppose there is any answer, but anyhow I've had the satisfaction of saying my little say. JAUNDICED.

A Moot Question

DEAR JAUNDICED: If an amicable settlement of this problem is ever achieved it will probably be, as you suggest, through the consistent and conscientious application of the Golden Rule by persons on both sides of the counter. In the meantime, until that millenium of tranquillity arrives, it devolves upon the saleswoman to accept her trials with a maximum of philosophical grace.

• • • •

The only immediate escape from the situation is to promote yourself out of it. And to advance in a job which entails contact with the public, the incumbent must be able to make constant flexible and successful adjustment to the temperamental idiosyncracies of others.

Acquire a pleasant impersonality which enables you to turn a deaf inner ear to the fussiness of the woman across the counter. This can only be done if your physical health is kept at par or above. Otherwise nervous irritability with its inevitable chain of unpleasant consequences enters into and complicates an already difficult situation.

• • • •

No doubt the average business man does have his tongue in his cheek when he takes as his motto, "The customer is always right," but he is proving his masculine ability to rise above personalities in the public mart—and the average saleswoman could do no better than to follow his example.

It would be interesting to hear the woman shopper's side of this moot question. Perhaps some of our readers will oblige us to that extent. M. H.

D.A.R. Members Sing National Anthem Like a Dirge, Oregon Delegate Says

Hang on to High Notes, Mrs. Horstall Says in Plea for Pep.

DAUGHTERS of the American Revolution, women who consider themselves among the Nation's most patriotic citizens, sing the national anthem incorrectly. They hang on to the high notes like a bunch of operatic sopranos and drag out the entire song as if it were a funeral dirge.

This criticism of the daughters' rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner" comes from one of their own members, Mrs. William Horsfall, of Mashfield, Oreg., delegate to the fourty-fourth D. A. R. Congress now in session in Washington.

Of course Mrs. Horsfall is more critical than most persons of the way the national anthem is delivered, she admitted yesterday at the Shoreham as she prepared to attend the afternoon session of the congress. As national music chairman of the American Legion Auxiliary it's her job to try to get everybody in the United States to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" as it was intended to be sung.

Pleads for More Pep.

Since her appointment last November she has been traveling all over the country pleading with people to put some pep and spirit into their Nation's song, to stop embroidering the original theme with variations and to observe the correct tempo. She hopes she will be able while here to persuade Daughters of the American Revolution to mend their vocal ways where "The Star-Spangled Banner is concerned.

Mrs. Horsfall has already brought American Legion Auxiliaries around to using the standardized version. She will attend the convention of the National Federation of Music Clubs this summer in Philadelphia as a delegate. While there she will teach the federation the correct way to sing "O say can you see——" and all the rest of it.

Where did she get the standardized version? From a committee appointed in the course of the World War at the request of the National Education Association. Among the members appointed by the commissioner of education were John Philip Sousa and Walter Damrosch. It was their job to make a uniform version of the national anthem.

No Noticeable Retards.

The result is "The Star-Spangled Banner" in the original key of B flat and in the original tempo. This means there are no long holds and no noticeable retards, according to Mrs. Horsfall.

"It's about time Americans were learning to sing their national song as it was meant to be sung," she said yesterday. "Can you imagine Englishmen singing 'God Save the King' in several tempos? Can you imagine Frenchmen using more than one version of 'La Marseillaise'? Of course not. Whenever 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is played, the standardized version should be used. The Navy Band is already using it. And whenever 'The Star-Spangled Banner' is sung, whether it's by a D. A. R. member or by an opera star, it should be sung in the standardized version," Mrs. Horsfall concluded.

Underwood & Underwood.

Here's a modern crusader, Mrs. William Horsfall, who is traveling all over the United States trying to get everybody to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" as it was intended to be sung. Just now she's concentrating on the vocalizing of her sister D. A. R.'s.

Writer Pursues Business Career

THERE'S a legend in general belief to the effect that anyone with literary ability must necessarily be extremely lacking in all matters pertaining to business and financial matters. Statistics show this to be more or less true.

Mrs. Fred T. Schilplin, St. Cloud, Minn., who is in Washington this week as candidate for the office of treasurer general of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is the exception to this rule.

Mrs. Schilplin has been for many years associated with her husband in the operation of the Times Publishing Co. in St. Cloud, which publishes a daily and weekly paper, and which does an important printing business in a large territory.

This year Mrs. Schilplin has published the first modern anthology of Minnesota verse, which lists more than 60 writers. Her other writings, covering a long period of years, touch on historical subjects relating to the Northwest, and are generally conceded to be valuable contributions to the historical records of that section.

During her student days Mrs. Schilplin distinguished herself in the field of mathematics, winning high honors each year during her high school and university days, believing the literary success which was to be hers.

In her D. A. R. activities Mrs. Schilplin was regent of the St. Cloud Chapter, which she organized, has been State regent, State recording secretary and State historian. In the latter office Mrs. Schilplin won distinction for Minnesota by being awarded the prize of the national society for the greatest number of State historical papers published.

Career Woman's Political Rise Threatens Social Precedence Now Accorded Officials' Wives

By Malvina Lindsay.
Woman's Page Editor.

FEMININE social convention is about to receive another upset in what may be roughly designated as the anti-wife movement. By that is meant a growing tendency to honor women on the basis of their own accomplishments rather than on that of their husbands' positions.

• • • •

Several women's organizations within recent months have taken the stand that women who have achieved public and political prominence should be given social precedence over women who are wives of prominent men or high Government officials. The recent dinner in Washington of the National Democratic Women's Club is a case in point. At this, outstanding feminine Presidential appointees, such as Frances Perkins, Josephine Roche, Katherine Lenroot, Mary Dewson—all of them notable for individual achievement—sat at the speakers' table while official wives sat with the audience. Thus a bit of social history was made.

• • • •

Certainly no disrespect was intended the official wives and certainly none was felt. These women, all of them progressive minded, and many of them achievers in their own right, would be the first to disclaim any empty honors based on social snobbery.

MRS. GRUNDY has long given the woman of achievement—particularly if she is unmarried—the worst of it when it came to social honors. No matter how hard she might work in behalf of some civic project, it was always the wife of the member of the executive committee who sat on the platform when the project was dedicated. No matter what the single woman might do to help her party win an election, it was the wife of the political bigwig who sat in the convention box or who wore the corsage at the party banquets.

• • • •

This absurd convention was carried to such an extreme that a woman's organization could not invite a man to speak or otherwise honor him without having his wife at his side to wear a bouquet and take a bow. Yet on the other hand it would have considered it a travesty to invite to any meeting (and to present with a box of cigars) the husband of the distinguished woman speaker.

• • • •

Happily the country seems to be coming to its senses in the matter of naming women to public office without regard to their masculine backgrounds. Never has there been a time when so many women who stood on their own feet professionally and politically were in high position. The logical next step would seem to be the shearing of public social life from the king and queen consort tradiion.

SO FAR as purely social life goes there is no particular reason why a woman should not be card indexed and honored according to her husband's official rank or public standing. But to use such a measuring stick in the social aspects of public life, not only is silly but is unfair to both women and men.

• • • •

It is not only unfair to women of achievement but also to wives who, in the lottery of life, have drawn husbands without official position or business prominence. While the American tradition that for every successful man there is a "little woman back of him" may be partly true, it must also be remembered that many "wonderful little women" have poor material in the way of husbands to work on and that they never get adequate returns from their efforts. Again it might be remembered that often a man gets to the top even when the "little woman" is considerable of a millstone about his neck.

• • • •

One of the most promising aspects of modern society is that both men and women are being thrown increasingly on their own. In the constantly shifting economic picture; their grandfathers' prowess and their social cliques do not matter a great deal. The tribe and the clan are losing their social significance. So may the husband. Thus may another step be taken toward a Utopia in which individuals will be judged on their own merits and not on the accident of birth, fortune or marriage.

Hospitals Replace Women With Men

New Anesthetics Plan Is Tried at Bellevue.

Women are being replaced by men in the giving of anesthetics. At least this is the way a new plan at Bellevue Hospital in New York is working out since it calls for graduates in medicine to take care of anesthesia. Comparatively few of the graduates in medicine are women and an even smaller percentage of the nurses are men.

Formerly nurses administered the anesthetics. They became skilled technicians, according to Dr. S. S. Goldwater, commissioner of New York Hospitals, but lacked the basic training in medical sciences.

This training is considered necessary in giving the newer type of anesthetic which consists of an injection into the spinal column. If the plan of replacing nurse technicians with graduates in medicine is successful at Bellevue it will probably be extended to other hospitals. Thus the number of unemployed nurses will be increased.

OBJECT— Not MATRIMONY

By LILLIAN BARKER.

On her eighteenth birthday Katrina Harman receives two great shocks. She discovers that her fortune has been lost and that Tazewell Bronson has no intention of marrying her, although he offers to be her "protector" and pays her debts, to the extent of several hundred dollars, for which she gives him her I. O. U. She determines not to see him again. She leaves one job, when he finds out where she is working; then goes to work as a companion to an elderly woman, Mrs. Fremys-Dillon. He discovers her again, comes to see her and tries to explain his position, that he has seen so much of unhappy marriages, including his own parents', that he fears to marry. Mrs. Fremys-Dillon discovers his presence and since she had warned Katrina that she does not want a companion who has romances to distract her from her work, she fires her.

RIGHTEOUSLY indignant, burning with resentment and bent on vindicating herself, Katrina had said: "If you knew the real truth about all this——"

"Truth! You have the temerity to use that word to me when the truth's not in you. No, I want no more of your falsehoods.

"And to think," in a wail of self-pity the enraged and "outraged" Mrs. Fremys-Dillon had lamented, "I trusted you so implicity. Yes, you charmed me with your French, won my greatest admiration. And believing in your conscientiousness and honesty—nonexistent qualities, as developments prove—you won my affection, and I would've done anything, everything for you."

An Unjust Person.

"You're not only unreasonable and unjust, you are downright cruel!" Trina had managed to get in that brief denunciation of her own. "If you weren't——"

"Cruel! Cruel! I've been entirely too kind. That's the trouble. Too kind, too considerate and far, far too trusting. Not in all my life have I been so taken in. Imagine if I'd started on a world tour with you next month, as planned, all the neglect I would've suffered! Thank heaven, however, that is a risk I shall be spared. For you are discharged from my employ, Katrina Harman, here and now. The doctor has telephoned for a trained nurse, as you just heard a moment ago, and she should be here any moment to look after me.

"So," a back-hand wave punctuating the order, "you will leave this room at once. You will also leave the hotel in the morning. The day clerk will hand you $10 for your two days' services."

That withering, galling, crushing dismissal, and her own ignominious exit from the room, with all those onlookers, doctor, clerk and tattler-maid witnesses to her shame!

Gladys Arrived.

The whirlwind arrival of Gladys Carlford in green-and-yellow-striped smock—for Glad blew in just like a whirlwind—abruptly terminated Katrina's reflections.

"Gee, kid," drawled Gladys, "you're at it again, worrying, moping and just fixing to cry, aren't you? I know you are by that ready-to-weep expression of the eye. So it looks as if your little 'cheerer-upper' got here just in time to stave off the weeps, doesn't it? But what I really came for, Trina, was to take you down to breakfast. I've cooked real Southern, soda-and-buttermilk biscuits, for us on my kitchenette stove. They'll be all cold, too, if we don't step on it."

"Imagine Southern biscuits! Just let me get my hat, though. Right after breakfast I must dash out for a paper." Trina was thinking of the advertising columns on which she was once more pinning her hopes.

"This is one morning," Glad pulled at her chum's dress-sleeve, "you won't have to sprint to a newsstand for a paper. I beat you to it, see! Bought a newspaper for you. It's in my room. So let's trek downstairs to some good old home-cooking!"

Trina trekked. Feasted, too. And buttering a second biscuit, said: "You're a swell cook, honey. These are the best biscuits I've tasted since last summer . . . during my last visit home, with my aunt in Atlanta. All of which recalls the letter I sent Aunt Julia the same night I wrote you about my grand job. The position I got fired from less than two hours later. Wasn't that a tragedy?"

"Nothing less. And how you lost it, 'sugar pie,' that's what burns me up! Why couldn't Tazewell Bronson have kept away from Mrs. Fremys-Dillon's suite when you were sittin' so pretty? Even if the woman was a nut, she was crazy about you. Thirty-five per week and all expenses . . ."

Katrina, laying in her plate a piece of biscuit she'd been nibbling on, broke in, a trifle impatiently: "I told you, Glad, while recounting all the happenings of that hectic night in the hotel, that Taz went there to make his intimate confession. If he knew now, though, that his call had resulted in my getting sacked, wouldn't he worry?

"But," Katrina's eyes brightened, "supposing I called Taz up this morning, immediately, at his father's brokerage office and told him . . . well, just that I'm out of work say . . . he might be able to help me get another place, mightn't he? Perhaps a job-as-companion to one of his mother's right old lady friends. What do you think, Glad? Tell me."

Gladys looked at Trina, pityingly, for several dragged-out moments before he said:

"I think . . . in fact, I know it won't do any good to telephone Tazewell Bronson. You couldn't reach him, possibly. He's en roue to Europe, to Rome. Shoved off last night on the Rex, with a titled party, Prince and Princess Dell'-Aquila, and get this, my dear—it's an ear full—with the beautiful young Italian countess, Luisa Maria San Marco.'"

Had Gone Abroad.

And passing over the newspaper which she'd picked up from a chair conveniently near, "The reason the swanky shiek's departure made page 1 is because he held up the liner half an hour in order to get aboard with 'the titled party.'

"'Titled party!'" Glad's exclamation was a sneer, "that gives me a pain in the neck. Not satisfied with making you lose your job at the Blue Moon, Beau Brummel Branson traipsed down to Atlantic City and made you lose your job there. Now he's traipsing off to Europe, never giving you a thought, a second's concern. The utter selfishness of him! Darn his time and double-darn him, this too-good-looking-to-be-trusted Taz Bronson!"

In the solitude of her own room, weeping between the lines, Katrina managed to read the article which downstairs had seemed only a blur, illegible, indecipherable.

Taz on the high seas . . . crossing the Atlantic . . . soon he'd be in Rome, thousands of miles away, and until . . . no telling when!

But after that reunion in Atlantic City how could he have gone away like that? Without even a word of good-by, as Gladys in all her raging against him had said?

And the manner of his going, the spectacular holding-up of the Rex half an hour beyond the scheduled sailing-time, didn't that indicate a last-minute decision to shove off? Otherwise wouldn't he have boarded the ship along with other passengers, especially those in "the titled party" he later joined?

This countess-member of the party, though, how long had Tazewell known her? And what, if anything, was the matter with him?

Her mind rife with such questions and with all sorts of disquieting surmises and speculations, Trina sat and grieved and moped till midday.

Then, in a mood of self-disgust and self-upbraiding, she turned to the "help-wanted-female" columns of the morning paper. But not an ad did she see. Not a single one worth wasting car-fare, shoe leather or even a postage stamp on. There was an afternoon daily, however, which she occasionally bought and which sometimes carried advertisements more or less promising. According to her watch, too, the first edition of that newspaper should be on the stands just about now . . .

Fine Creams Fill Surprise Beauty Packet

Perfumes, Boys' Shirts Also Featured in Bargains Now Offered.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NO MATTER how grown up we become and how far removed from the Santa Claus days there's still one thing that's bound to thrill us just as it used to—that's a surprise package!

A certain discriminating beauty expert who appreciates this bit of "little girl" about us takes our fancy this season with a spring surprise package of her very own. It's hardly fair to divulge the "inside secrets" of this beautifully wrapped, attractive box, but then again, it's hardly fair not to, when the contents are so necessary to hundreds of Washington women and so modestly priced at $2. So—confidentially, don't forget!—if you took a peep into the package here's what you'd find: A complete treatment for dry skin!

The treatment consists of a wonderful dry skin cream which sells for $5 if you buy it alone. This preparation is the result of years of experimentation. It is unique in its way, for while many creams help to restore dry skin to normal, few of them actually go all the way. This one does. It's rich, penetrating—and costly. Rare oils brought from far across the seas went into the making of it, oils worth a king's ransom in themselves.

Creams Are Praised.

Secondly there's an essential cream which cleanses the skin in a superb manner. It actually seems to flush the pores of their clogging impurities, and leaves them free to breath and function naturally.

A nourishing oil is soothing for tired, parched skins that are literally shriveling for lack of a soothing oil.

Next, there's a skin freshener which gives the skin life and vitality and helps you start the day literally aglow.

Matches in Flower Boxes.

You're keeping up with spring—in fact, a little ahead of it—if you choose your matches in flower boxes, with each match a flower. These colorful, attractive little novelties are the answer to the hostess' prayer, "please send me something that's a little bit different!" Her guest will just adore being offered a match from a tiny little flower bed in full bloom. They are frightfully inexpensive and a real boon, too, for each box holds several hundred matches.

Moth Preventive.

You take no chances that the pesky little moths will colonize your Persian rug or sable coat if you use a certain liquid frost. You simply spray it on and when it dries it leaves a harmless coating of white crystals which protect furs, fabrics and woolens.

The ingredients of this liquid frost are recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. It also bears the approval of a well-known institute.

You may use it with perfect assurance that it can not stain or injure any fabric.

Shirts Are "Dated."

Poor pop, he's just not in it now compared to Junior. If he buys a brand-new shirt and it goes to seed within the year, well, pop can't do a thing about it but buy another shirt. But, Junior, he can just take his shirt right back to a downtown store and they'll see that he gets another one free of charge.

Here's why: They have a new batch of what they call "dated shirts." They are guaranteed for one year from the date of purchase.

No matter how finicky, Junior is over shirts, he'll be bound to like these. They come in white, blue, tan and stripes, in neck sizes 11½ to 14½. All are preshrunk. All modestly priced.

Satin Lilies Offered.

Last-minute Easter shoppers will find the lovely white satin lilies featured in a downtown store appropriate little remembrances.

The long, straight stems are wrapped in green ribbon. The blossoms are soft, silky and snowy white. Inside some of the flowers is a lovely gold-encased lipstick with the fragrance of spring blossoms. Others boast a small bottle of perfume, "fragrant as the fertile earth after soft showers.

Such little things, Easter remembrances, but they mean so much. Think of the message, such a satin lily might bear, and think of the wonderful gift it brings!

Perfumes Reduced.

Speaking of perfumes—did you know that a famous French scent which sells ordinarily for $13.50 is on sale for only $3.15? This comes in several delicate scents, well suited to the spring season.

At the same counter is another bargain, not so drastically reduced perhaps, but a real bargain just the same. It usually costs $4. Now it's $1.95. It comes in four delightful floral fragrances, true to the flowers themselves. There's carnation, gardenia, jasmine and lilac.

These are special offers to introduce you to a new perfume counter where bargains in perfumes will be a frequent occurrence.

Goodwin, Post Staff.

The most popular contribution to the Easter dinner will be a large ice cream egg fashioned of contrasting flavors, covered with rich chocolate and decorated with a fluting of whipped cream.

Serve in Shape of Egg on Large Platter Surrounded by Coconut Straw; Strawberry Omelet Fine Morning Dish.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THERE is only one Easter dessert, ice cream, of course, molded of two contrasting flavors to form an Easter egg and covered with rich chocolate and decorated with a fluting of whipped cream. Serve it on a large platter nestled in a bed of coconut straw and let the hostess serve it at the table.

You have just enough time to order your favorite flavor combination, or perhaps, the strawberry and vanilla, or vanilla and nut combinations which are made up as a regular stock supply. Each egg makes 12 generous portions and from now until a week after Easter is being sold at the special price of $1.25.

The smaller family can use to better advantage the attractive individual molds that are made in an array of symbolic Easter shapes.

Strawberry Omelet with Bacon.

4 eggs
¼ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons hot water
Few grains baking powder
1 tablespoon butter

Separate yolks from whites. To yolks add salt and hot water; beat until thick and lemon colored. Add baking powder to whites and beat until stiff; cut and fold them into first mixture until well blended. Heat omelet pan, butter sides and bottom. Turn in mixture, spread evenly, place on range where it will cook slowly, occasionally turning the pan that omelet may brown evenly.

When well "puffed" and delicately browned underneath, place pan on center grate of a moderate oven to finish cooking the top. The omelet is cooked if it is firm to the touch when pressed by the finger. If it clings to the finger like the beaten whites of eggs, it needs longer cooking. When done spread with sweetened crushed strawberries, fold, turn and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

Sweet Potato Bunnies.

These may be made with cookie cutters. Boil large sweet potatoes for 15 minutes; cut lengthwise into slices about 1 inch thick. Cut bunnies out of these slices, inserting cloves for eyes. Place them in a baking dish and sprinkle with grated orange rind and sugar. Add ½ cup orange juice and bake in a hot oven until the potatoes are soft and candied (about 40 minutes).

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to help you with your culinary problems. Write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

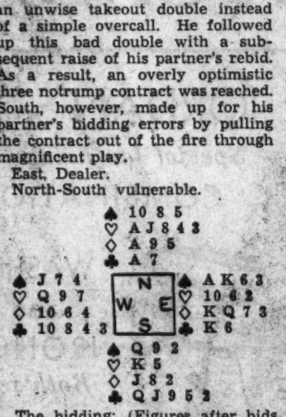
Culbertson On Bridge

The Takeout Double.

Often the "defending" side will take the attack away from the player who has opened the bidding. The most frequently employed weapon to effect this transformation of defense into attack is the takeout double. The requirements to make a takeout double under the Culbertson System of 1935 are similar to what they always have been. A minimum of three honor-tricks is needed, but the possession of sufficient honor strength alone is not enough. The doubling hand must be prepared for almost all possible responses.

On the hand below North made an unwise takeout double instead of a simple overcall. He followed up this bad double with a subsequent raise of his partner's rebid. As a result, an overly optimistic three notrump contract was reached. South, however, made up for his partner's bidding errors by pulling the contract out of the fire through magnificent play.

East, Dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

East	South	West	North
1◇(1)	Pass	Pass	Dbl.(2)
Pass	2♣	Pass	2♡
Pass	2NT(3)	Pass	3NT(4)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A better opening bid on this hand would be one spade. Perhaps East expected to get a heart response and wanted to show his spades at the level of one.

2—North has three honor-tricks and should have simply overcalled with one heart, feeling that unless his partner could voluntarily raise the overcall of one heart, there could be no game in the hand.

3—With 1½ honor-tricks and some strength in every suit, and having made a minimum response on the previous round, South must now show some signs of life.

4—A very unwise raise. North has shown more than the strength of his hand by previously doubling for a takeout and subsequently showing the heart suit, South, it must be remembered, did not even respond to the takeout double with one notrump in the first place, and made a strong bid only when North rebid.

The Play.

In response to his partner's bid, West opened the diamond ten. This card was ducked in dummy, and East's Queen won. The latter shifted rather deceptively to a low spade, away from the Ace-King.

South unhesitantingly jumped up with his Queen, marking the East hand with practically all of the outstanding strength on the bidding and spurning the more normal finesse against the spade Jack. South tackled the heart suit, praying the finesse would work and the suit would break. The Gods of Chance were with him and he ran five hearts. Not knowing who had the spade Jack, East bared down to the Ace-King of spades, the guarded King of diamonds, and the guarded King of clubs. Declarer led a spade from dummy, throwing East in. That player wisely avoided being thrown in a second time by cashing his other spade and returning a diamond.

Care in Drying Retains Vitamins in Fruit

Sulphur Dioxide Helps to Save Food Value, Cutter Says.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IN our present-day consciousness of vitamins and their importance the questions are often raised, "Are dried fruits as nutritious as fresh fruits?" "Have changes occurred in the drying process that render them less valuable as foods?" Ordinarily, dried fruit costs less than an equal quantity of fresh fruit, particularly when fruits are not in season. For example, it requires 5½ pounds of fresh apricots to make 1 pound of the dried fruit.

A recent report, based upon experimental data, indicates that proper drying processes preserve a very high proportion of the vitamin content of fruits. Dried peaches, prunes, apricots and grapes were tested for vitamins A, B, and C. Following careful feeding experiments in which white rats were used (inasmuch as this particular animal is susceptible to slight variations in vitamins) it was shown that from 66 to 100 per cent of the vitamin A content was retained in peaches, whether sun dried or dehydrated (water extracted by currents of dry air). In prunes that were treated with sulphur dioxide gas and dehydrated 91 per cent of vitamin A remained, but in unsulphured and sun-dried prunes only 43 per cent was preserved. Apricots showed the lowest retention of vitamin A of any fruit, varying from 16 to 51 per cent.

On the contrary, raisins lost a large proportion of their vitamin B when treated with sulphur dioxide gas. During the drying process only one-half the vitamin B is retained under the best conditions. In unsulphered peaches only 30 to 56 per cent of vitamin B remained. Dried fruits, therefore, can not be considered a substantial source of vitamin B, although unsulphured raisins retain the most.

Vitamin C in peaches was totally lost when sun dried unless they were treated with sulphur dioxide gas, in which event the total vitamin C content was retained. Prunes, if dipped in lye, then exposed to sulphur and sun dried, retained 100 per cent. All unsulphured prune products lost their vitamin C content.

Fruits are of value because of their mineral content. There is very little loss of mineral matter in the process of drying and many fruits contain iron, copper, calcium, phosphorus, sodium, potassium and sulphur in varying amounts.

We must understand that dried fruits are not as high in vitamins as certain other types of foods, and it is well known that cooking destroys vitamin C. Vitamin A will not withstand prolonged cooking in the presence of air, hence in order to preserve this vitamin the process should be carried out in a covered dish and at a high temperature for only a short period. Vitamin B is stable at ordinary cooking temperatures.

Music Aided Romance Of Frederick and Ingrid

Music played an important part in the romance of Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark and Princess Ingrid of Sweden. Their first letters were largely on musical matters after the prince had met the princess while in Stockholm to attend a concert. From music they soon progressed in their correspondence to affairs of the heart.

Notice Served Of Finish Fight On a Sales Tax

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Va., April 18.—Walter M. Evans, Richmond, attorney for the Virginia State Retail Merchants Association, sounded a challenge at the fifth annual banquet of the Waynesboro Association last night when he said, "Merchants have long been the bearers of heavy tax burdens in Virginia and they will continue to be unless the 30,000 retailers of the State unite in protest against any undue extraction of taxes or licenses by State or local governments."

He emphatically declared that "extra session or no extra session, a sales tax in Virginia is not needed, and not desired. The retail merchants of Virginia will fight the sales tax to the last ditch."

Mr. Evans outlined the program of the State association in combating "undesirable" legislation at Richmond. He termed the "educational bloc" the most difficult to compete with in the effort to maintain a low tax rate. "The public schools touch each individual so closely that in considering demands for funds, sentiment ofttimes sways judgment," he asserted.

Ten directors were elected. They are Guy W. Hamilton, W. Doyle Quesenbery, H. N. Cloutier, W. M. Lewis, L. G. Carlisle, E. McCarthy Driver, A. M. Hyman, E. I. Carruthers, jr., J. S. Ellis and W. M. Humphries. Reports of the activities of the group during the last year were made. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Daniels entertained with a musical program.

Mystery Damages To 'Hardy' Apples Peril Total Output

Panhandle Region Affected by Cold

Plant Expert States Tightly Packed Buds May Explain.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 18.—A "freak" damage to York Imperial apple buds from Monday night's cold snap may cut seriously into the total crop of Yorks for eastern West Virginia. Yorks are the principal variety here.

Growers reported generally Tuesday that the apples were injured only slightly. It was believed that Yorks, latest variety to bloom and the hardiest of varieties grown here, were untouched by the freeze which injured blooming peaches and several lesser varieties of apples.

Reports Wednesday from the Panhandle indicated unsuspected damage. Yorks have suffered, in some cases severely. Henry W. Miller, of Consolidated Orchards, Paw Paw, reported that two big York plantings near Paw Paw failed to show a single live bud Wednesday morning; while a big York block across the river in Maryland, somewhat higher in location than the Paw Paw blocks, showed a heavy kill, but with plenty of the buds left to make a crop.

In Berkeley County, damage of slightly less than 50 per cent to the Yorks was found by Manager Oscar Dick on Dr. A. B. Eagle's Cumberland Valley orchard, Falling Waters district, in an examination Tuesday afternoon. The approximate half of the buds killed should not affect the crop there.

The York damage is a mystery to orchardists here. The York, usually hardiest of apple varieties, is still tightly wrapped as to buds. Three or four years ago a similar damage came to Yorks here.

E. C. Sherwood, State plant pathologist stationed in the orchard belt to advise growers on problems of insect control, explained the growth was still so tightly packed that it froze, in contrast with varieties where the growth was loose.

He reported some crabapple stock which he had examined at Inwood where the stocks supporting the bloom and bud growth has been burned brown by the cold. All such growth, he said, would drop off.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 18.—The fruit of Albemarle County appears to have escaped injury from the snow, high winds and cold nights of the past few days.

At Crozet, in the western end of the county, center of the fruit industry, some orchardists resorted to the use of smudge pots on Monday and Tuesday nights. Ray W. Warrick, a leading orchardist, said the prospect is still good for a large yield in the Albemarle area.

Edward L. Branch.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., April 18.—Funeral services were held today for Edward L. Branch, 62, retired manager of the Clarksburg offices of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. Bulk of Crashes Laid To Untested Autoists

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 18.—J. Warren Topping, assistant attorney general attached to the Virginia Motor Vehicle Division, today said awkward and physically unfit drivers who obtained operators' licenses without an examination when the driving permit law became effective in 1933 are responsible for many of the accidents and traffic tangles now bewildering police authorities.

Topping said there are more than 250,000 automobile operators in Virginia who obtained their driving permits without an examination. They got their permits under sections of the law exempting them from a driving test if they certified they had driven at least 500 miles and were without physical defects.

Peery Advisers Study Methods Of Trial Courts

Sub-Committee Members Confer on Clarifying Procedure.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 18.—Members of the sub-committee named by the Governor's advisory council to consider matters relating to trial justices conferred for eight hours today at the capitol.

Most of the time was given to consideration of problems suggested by lists of questions submitted by the justices to the attorney general, the auditor and the department of public welfare. Answers to the questions submitted to the attorney general were issued today in pamphlet form.

Haskins Hobson, delegate from Chesterfield and chairman of the group, said the aim of the committee was to discuss laws pertaining to trial justices, their proceedings and the costs of procedure with the view of recommending clarification of present statutes on the subject.

He said counties that do not now come under the trial justices act of 1934 would be asked to discuss with the committee whether they will take action to make the 1934 act apply to them and thus eliminate six similar acts on the statute books.

The trial justices, chairman of the supervisors or county manager, and Commonwealth's attorneys from Henrico, Chesterfield, Arlington and Clarke counties would be asked to appear, it was stated.

William R. Shands, State director of legislative research, who is serving as secretary of the group, announced the next meeting of the sub-committee would be at 10 a. m. May 14 at the capitol.

Nice Also Approves 'Beauty Parlor Bill' and Others.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 18.—The bill creating a State police department became law late today as Gov. Nice and the presiding officers of the Senate and House of the Maryland General Assembly signed it.

Although the bill increases the salaries of the State officers, it provides for the same number of policemen as are now operating under supervision of the commissioner of motor vehicles. Six investigators at the motor vehicle bureau will be transferred to the new department with the rank of detective sergeants.

The "beauty parlor" bill also was signed today. It provides for appointment of a State board of hairdressers and beauty culturists to regulate and supervise the profession.

Cannot Be Avoided, However, Says Shenandoah Festival Chief.

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Va., April 18.—Fred A. Read, jr., director of the twelfth annual Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, today expressed regret at the conflict in dates between the fete and the pageant on the Chancellorsville Battlefield, near Fredericksburg, but said it can not be avoided.

The apple blossom festival is scheduled for May 2 and 3, and the re-enactment of the Chancellorsville Battle for May 2.

"We cooperated in every way possible, and certainly did not want this conflict to happen," Mr. Read said, "but when the fruit experts informed us that the blossoms would be most beautiful during the first four days in May, we were obliged to hold the celebration on May 2 and 3.

"Thursday and Friday always have been the days of the week for the celebration. Participants in the parade are busy on the first three days of the week and could not attend if the celebration were held then."

Winchester merchants declare their regular Saturday business with buyers here and from the surrounding country make it impossible for them to close or have part in a festival on Saturday, so that day of the week is barred, Mr. Read said.

Virginia School Aid From FERA Funds Waits 'Cooperation'

Guard's Status Doubted, Death Case Is Mistrial

By the Associated Press.

Gate City, Va., April 18.—A jury's doubt as to whether Alton Leonard, fatally wounded in a chain gang break at Moccasin Gap, was a duly authorized convict guard, brought a mistrial in the case of Thomas Cole Hart, charged with the slaying.

No documentary evidence to prove Leonard was authorized to serve as a guard was introduced in the trial. Testimony on this point was confined to the statement of W. F. Smith, prison camp supervisor, who said Sergt. Hix of the Scott County camp had appointed Leonard.

Many Protests Sent to Peery On Rural Relief

Farm Labor Demoralized by AAA Program, Letters Tell Governor.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 18.—Gov. Peery today disclosed that he is receiving many communications expressing opposition to the Federal Emergency Relief Administration's program in rural Virginia.

As the planting season approaches the governor's informants declare the present relief program through the VERA has demoralized farm labor. The governor has said that apparently many rural citizens may prefer no Federal relief at all to present conditions. It was pointed out that the AAA has served as rural relief.

In the cities the situation is reversed. There is as much of a demand as ever on the part of the municipalities for relief money, the governor said.

The governor said the communications are coming to him in greater numbers daily.

He reiterated his statement that "the localities are going to get some of the profits from the ABC board's operations."

Hopkins to Ban Blanket Policy in Handling of Rural Requests.

Agent Is Ordered To Survey Demand

Applications of 15 Other States to Get 'Early Consideration.'

By the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator, said yesterday that applications of 16 States, including Virginia, for rural-school aid would be "settled" within a few days.

He indicated at his weekly press conference that no general policy would be laid down to dispose of the school relief situation.

"Blanket policies," he said, "get you into trouble."

Earlier in the day, subordinate relief officials indicated that a blanket policy, under which all State applications for school funds would be granted, was Virginia's only hope of getting a requested $600,000.

The matter is being discussed with the Old Dominion, it was said, on a basis of State co-operation, under which ten such grants have been made already this year. However, Virginia's Legislature is not in session and school terms are nearing their end.

The answer to Virginia's application, a telegram from Hopkins to Gov. Peery, was:

"This will acknowledge receipt of your application for teacher relief in rural schools in your State. You understand that such aid is being given on a work-relief basis to those States that have found it financially impossible to keep the schools open for the normal school term. In practically every instance the State authorities have as a condition of such aid made provision through legislation for assistance. The State Legislatures have co-operated in meeting the current requirements.

"We are sending a representative to your State to examine the needs of your rural schools on the work-relief basis and will be glad to discuss assistance to your State on the same basis as it has been granted to other States."

That was sent March 20.

Two weeks ago, Alan Johnstone, Southern regional relief field representative, discussed the application with Virginia officials, but FERA officials said the matter is still "pending." Hopkins would say nothing specifically about the Virginia request.

Last year, under a blanket arrangement, Virginia was given $707,323 for carrying on rural school terms to their normal length.

Release Charts Loaded With an Imposing Array

Will Kill 'Summer Slump;' Civic Theater in View; Amusement Jottings.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Four new pictures, all of which will be seen on the screens of Loew's Washington Theaters, are announced for release during the remaining weeks of the current month by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

These will begin with "Reckless," the co-starring vehicle for Jean Harlow and William Powell, opening at Loew's Palace tomorrow, and will include, in addition, "One New York Night," featuring Franchot Tone and Una Merkel; "Baby Face Harrington," with Charles Butterworth in the title role, and "Mark of the Vampire," a new Tod Browning production—Tod Browning, you will recall, was the wizard of eerie effects that had so much to do with shaping the career of the late Lon Chaney—with Lionel Barrymore, Elizabeth Allan and Belga Lugosi.

"One New York Night," one is interested to observe, is based on the Edward Childs Carpenter's stage play, "Order, Please!" Jack Conway was the director.

Boasts Notable Authorship.

That strangely versatile scrivener who can be funny or serious, as the occasion requires, Nunnally Johnson, and Edwin H. Knopf supplied the script for "Baby Face Harrington" from a play contrived by Edgar Selwyn and William Le Baron.

"Reckless," of course, will be self-revelatory no later than tomorrow morning at the corner of Thirteenth and F streets.

Spring and summer productional activity is not limited to the M.-G.-M. plant. According to a late statement from Jack L. Warner, the one of the Freres Warner who happens to be in charge of production on the West Coast, the combination Warner Brothers-First National plant is geared to maintain its present production peak through the next five months.

A total of 19 pictures have been completed, are now in work or are definitely scheduled to be released prior to September 1, 1935.

To Be Seen Here.

The productions, which will be shown in Washington at the Earle and Metropolitan Theaters, include Paul Muni's "Black Fury," Cosmopitan's "Oil for the Lamps of China," the Cagney release, "The G-Men;" Marion Davies' "Page Miss Glory," Max Reinhardt's "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Captain Blood," with Robert Donat starred; Dolores Del Rio in "In Caliente," the next Muni feature, now appearing in serial form in Collier's Weekly, "Dr. Socrates;" "The Girl From Tenth Avenue," "Broadway Gondolier," "The Goose and the Gander," "Stranded," "Back to Broadway," "Dinkey," "Crashing Society," "The Irish in Us," "The Case of the Lucky Legs," new Perry Mason mystery and "Serves You Right."

Since United Artists, Paramount, Fox, Universal, RKO-Radio and all the rest of the majors, not forgetting Columbia, which recently crashed the first flight with miles to spare, all still are doing business at the same old stand, it begins to look a little tough for that old-time bugaboo known as the "summer slump."

Remember those "Greater Movie Seasons" we used to have not so far back? It all seems a little silly now, doesn't it?

A telephone call from Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the National Theater and the National Theater Players, just back from a Manhattan week-end, indicates that "Petticoat Fever," the play that Dennis King was to have brought here en route from Chicago to New York—but didn't—seems a surety for the "little season" of the National Theater Players, to be inaugurated with an actors' fund benefit performance, in co-operation with Daniel Frohman, dean of American producers and for more than half a century president of the Actors Fund of America, Sunday night, April 28. It is also hoped, but by no means a certainty, that in addition to Al Jolson, whose presence already has been petitioned, Joe Cook and George M. Cohan may be induced to come down for the benefit performance a week from Sunday. At any rate, it will be a gala occasion, worth buying tickets for well in advance.

What! A Civic Theater?

Out of the welter of wordage that has been devoted to the topic here and elsewhere something tangible finally seems to be emerging. I mean this business of a representative Washington civic theater—or whatever it may be decided that the institution ought to be called, best to define its purposes and intents.

The Drama Guild of Washington, it seems, has launched an intensive drive for new membership for the purpose of organizing an all-Washington theater.

The bulletin that comes to hand goes on to say that early in the season the Drama Guild began preparation for this newly launched drive by reorganizing on a scale, and after a plan, closely modeled after the most successful civic theaters.

Throughout the year classes have been conducted for instruction in acting, stage technique, scene designing and scene construction. At the opening of the fall season these classes will be enlarged and others included in the curriculum to meet the need for a more extensive program.

In addition to the increased opportunities for instruction the guild plans to offer a laboratory theater where new plays will be tried and new actors and directors will be free to exercise their talents. Hitherto, there has been little opportunity for writers to see their of production. However, the proposed laboratory theater will offer facilities for actual production, under the supervision of experienced directors, by eliminating the cost of expensive settings, costumes and properties. All plays tried out in this manner will have the added advantage of the criticism of an audience composed both of students of the theater and experienced theatergoers.

Permanent Home Sought.

Negotiations are under way at the present time to secure a permanent building for the Drama Guild, where theater, workshops and clubrooms will be available in a central location.

A special committee has been appointed to consider candidates for the position of full-time director. Seeking to emulate the principles of other little theater groups, the Drama Guild is on the qui vive for a director who has had the wide experience necessary to equip him for the executive leadership of such an enterprise.

It is particularly stressed in the campaign for membership that everyone interested actively or otherwise in the theater is welcome to become a member of the newly organized Drama Guild. The aim of the entire campaign is to found a Washington theater for all of Washington.

The Drama Guild will close the current season with Mordaunt Shairp's "Crime at Blossoms," a clever satire, to be seen at Wardman Park Theater, April 29 and 30.

Competition in Field.

This project of the Drama Guild, so often and so vehemently advocated in these columns, admirable as it is, still is not assured of clear sailing.

There is another local acting group of the first rank that has been similarly paving the way for the establishment of a permanent playhouse and laboratory theater.

It has money in the bank, has laid the foundation for the creation of a repertory of splendid plays and has been quietly negotiating for a property suitable for its purposes which it can acquire as a permanent home of distinctly Washington drama.

So the race, apparently, is on. Consolidation would be a grand idea, but consolidation of Washington's amateur and semi-professional acting organizations seems to be something beyond the power of human endeavor to accomplish. Whichever gets there first, needless to say, will hold the whip hand.

It has never occurred to this column—and probably never will, as a matter of fact—that the National Capital is sufficiently interested to make two civic theaters as successful as one cooperative, coordinated and comprehensive enterprise of this sort deserves to be.

Is Coaching New Nora.

Lisa Gardiner, one of Washington's best-known dance directors, is coaching Phoebe Steffey in the "Tarantella," which she will dance in Constance Connor Brown's production of "A Doll's House."

The play will be presented at Wardman Park Theater next Tuesday and Wednesday, April 23 and 24, by the Studio of Theater Arts, of which Miss Brown is director.

Incidentally, the last actress Miss Gardiner coached in this dance, which provides one of the high spots of the great Ibsen classic, was Josephine Hutchinson.

Miss Hutchinson, who was so work produced because of the cost soon to go on to greater achievements as a member of Eva Le Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theater and a Hollywood star, was at that time a member of the old Ram's Head Players, presided over by her former husband, Robert Bell.

Provides Tense Climax.

The "Tarantella" provides an intensely dramatic finish for the second act of "A Doll's House." It is partly because of this attractive scene, critics say, that so many leading actresses have cherished the part of Nora, which Miss Steffey will play in the current production.

The dance is supposed to be based on either one of two old Italian legends—one to the effect that victims of the tarantula's bite cured themselves by executing the intricate steps of this graceful dance; the other that victims of the poisonous insect danced themselves to death in its frenzied measures.

Let your temperament be your guide!

Herb Cook and His Three Little Words—of all the titles for a living act!—were in New York yesterday, recording for the Brunswick company. The three girls and their arranger-manager-accompanist return to the Capital today to complete rehearsals for their opening tomorrow at the Earle, where they are under long-term contract as a "personality act" to succeed Bert Granoff, granted three months' leave for intensive voice culture. These three charming young vocalists, with Herb Cook at the piano, will be featured in a special overture arranged by Conductor Freddie Clark of the house orchestra. They are, in case you have forgotten, Joan Jarrett, Frances Joy and Beth Raborn.

"Solitude" and one other number were recorded for Brunswick's national release yesterday.

That inane and meaningless "Three Little Words" business is an uninspired outgrowth of their signature song over the air. If this is a good name for the act, then why not refer to Paul Whiteman's orchestra as "Paul Whiteman and His 23 Little Words," or to Waring's Pennsylvanians as "Fred Waring and His 18 Little Words?" Does that make sense?

Absentee Vote.

So they had a baseball game yesterday, but imagine my chagrin upon arriving just outside the right-field wall to discover that the big tree no longer is there!

Woodman, that is the one you should have spared—along with the late Bert Williams' slippery elm!

National Opens Monday With Important Play

Jane Cowl in Stellar Role; New Pictures Announced; Bills for New Week.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

The waning season of the legitimate drama will be briefly revived next Monday night in the National Theater when the Theater Guild's production of "Rain From Heaven," by S. N. Behrman, will open a week's engagement with Jane Cowl and John Halliday the principal members of the cast. This, incidentally, will be the season's final Guild subscription play.

"Rain From Heaven" was directed by Philip Moeller and boasts a scenic investiture designed and executed by Lee Simonson. In the supporting cast are such admirable players as Lily Cahill, Jay Fassett, remembered for a particularly fine performance in Rachel Crothers' "As Husbands Go;" Judson Laire, Jose Ruben, Hancey Castle, Marshall Grant, Staats Cotsworth and Alice John.

The usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Abandoning, for the time being, at least, its custom of opening its new bills on Thursday, the Belasco this week will present George Arliss in "The Iron Duke," for the first time on a Washington screen, on Saturday. The title role of this British-made picture, of course, is Lord Wellington, conqueror of Napoleon at Waterloo. While Wellington is held in public consciousness principally as a great soldier and fighter, Mr. Arliss is said to make clear in this vehicle that the man had a gentler side that concerned itself largely with the romanticisms of feminine companionship and the entertainment of small children.

Tomorrow at the Earle Theater, Washington will have its first opportunity to make the acquaintance of Herb Cook and His Three Little Words. This is an act that has been put under a term contract by John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers interests in Washington. This act consists of three charming young feminine vocalists and Herb Cook, one of America's foremost pianists, composers and arrangers, who acts as their manager, accompanist and "producer." You will like this innovation as a successor to the year-long engagement of Bert Granoff in the Earle's orchestra pit. On the screen for the new week will be that gorgeous new musical, starring Al Jolson and Ruby Keeler, "Go Into Your Dance." See Wednesday's Post. Additional stage acts will be presented by Gracie Barrie, going into her third week; the Donatella Bros. and Carmen, Bob Hall, "the extemporaneous chap," and The Three Cossacks, premier skaters.

Loew's Fox Theater concludes its "Cherry Blossom Festival of Hits" the week beginning tomorrow with a double-barreled entertainment. On the screen will be Richard Barthelmess in "Four Hours to Kill," a screen version of the Krasna play, "Small Miracle," in which the star is supported by Joe Morrison, Gertrude Michael, Helen Mack and Ray Millad. On the stage that master of melody, George Olsen, with Ethel Shutta the featured vocalist, will present an interval of modern rhythms that are already known and liked by Washington theater patrons. Presenting a complete revue, Olsen, of course, will bring along numerous other specialists to augment the frequent appearances of Miss Shutta—in private life, Mrs. Olsen.

Brunette and Blonde in New Films

Caution Grips Primo Over Louis Tiff

By Jack Miley,
A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 18.—While members of Primo Carnera's kitchen cabinet, like lads whistling their way past a grave yard on a moonless night, continued to pooh-pooh the homicidal abilities of Joe Louis, the large Latin indicated quite clearly today that he doesn't share the optimism of his advisers on this crucial and potentially painful subject.

Although the former champion's Svengali, Chicago's Uncle Will Duffy, who has been scouting the black blaster in his anesthetizing enterprises out West, assures all who will listen that his salami-annihilator will tear the colored clouter's right arm from its socket and bash his brains out with it, the vast Venetian has misgiving regarding these dire deeds.

Takes Training Quarters.

So while Uncle Willy was popping off about the horrible fate that would be Joe's when he climbs into Yankee Stadium ring with Carnera on June 25, Da Preem, deciding that an ounce of prevention was worth a pound of cure, went out and acquired training quarters for immediate occupancy.

Primo and his pals will motor to Lake Oswego, near Auburn, N. Y., within the next few days and Mussolini's mit man will begin the most rigorous siege of his serio-comic career in preparation for his ordeal with Detroit's dark threat.

The proximity of Carnera's camp to the upstate sneezer should exert a restraining effect upon those members of Auburn's prison alumni who are always found wherever Primo sets up his punching bags and beak-busting equipment. For if the boys get out of order, there is a possibility that the Warden may drop around and recall them for post-graduate work, or parole violation.

Need Have No Fears.

Of course, the ponderous Pisan, whose finger prints are on file only at the pass-port bureau, need have no fears on this score; but if the "screw" from the nearby academy visit the ambling Alp's abattoir to witness a Sunday matinee workout, a peep at the patrons may make them think it is Old Home Week at the stir.

"I am not afraid of Louis," Carnera explained today, "but I respect him. I have never seen him fight, but his record shows he must be very good. If I whip him, I may get another chance with Baer—yes?"

Madison Square Garden announced today that prices for the Lou Ambers-Tony Canzoneri lightweight championship fight on May 10 will range from $1 to $5, exclusive of tax. This is the most expensive show in the Eighth Avenue arena since the Steve Hamas-Art Lasky production last fall, which rated $7 tops.

$23 For Title Battle.

While no statement was forthcoming, there were reports that the Garden may ask $23, ringside, for the Max Baer-Jimmy Braddock brawl at the Long Island Bowl on June 13. This is a pretty stiff tap, but if the boys think they can get it, they'll gamble. Many box office experts think that a $10 maximum would be a fair price for the entertainment.

Those watching the Barney Ross-Jimmy McLarnin battle for the welterweight title May 28 will pay anywhere from $1 to $10 for the privilege, according to Mike Jacobs, promoter of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club.

Mike will rig the Polo Grounds up to hold 60,000 patrons, though he indicates he can arrange for extra seats in the event the affair proves a sell-out. The scale of prices is the same as advertised for the previous two meetings between the warriors. Tickets will go on sale about May 1.

Baer, in Michigan, Urges 20-Rounders

Lansing Mich., April 18 (AP).—Max Baer, visiting the capitol today as an admitted lobbyist for a bill to legalize 20-round boxing matches in Michigan, intimated to the State Senate that he would fight Joe Louis, the Detroit Negro sensation, in Detroit next September if the measure is passed. The proposal already has passed the House.

Grabbing the Lieutenant Governor's gavel, the heavyweight champion said he wished he "could use this in my coming fight with Louis." Baer said he wished the Legislature "would help me balance my budget. My big trouble is I was involved in a breach of promise suit when I was 20 years old and since that time I have been in the hands of at least six attorneys."

Broaca Gives 8 Hits; Tight In Pinches

Ostermueller Holds Foe to Two Blows for Six Innings.

Rolfe, Crosetti Later Connect With Three Men On to Win.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 18.—The Yankees broke into the victory column today in their third attempt of the season, defeating the Boston Red Sox, 4 to 0, behind the steady eight-hit pitching of Johnny Broaca, starting his first full season as a major leaguer.

The former Yale star got into trouble several times, but pitched his way out. The Yanks, held to two hits in six innings, solved Fred Ostermueller for a pair of runs on Red Rolfe's single in the seventh and nicked Jack Welch for two more in the eighth on Frank Crosetti's double. Both blows came with the bases loaded.

Wynne of Western Ruled Out Because of Play on Sandlot

FRANK (HUCK) WYNNE, leading hitter in the interhigh baseball series last year and colorful all-high catcher for Western Hich School, has been dropped from the squad because he played in a sandlot game last Sunday, Coach Cliff Moore, of Western, said yesterday.

Playing outside games automatically makes a high-school team member ineligible to represent his school, according to the rules and regulations of the Interhigh Athletic Association. While his teammates expressed hope that their veteran back stop would be reinstated, Coach Moore said "he hasn't a chance" of being made eligible again. John Paul Collins, president of the interhigh athletic advisory board, also said he couldn't see "a ghost of a chance for him."

Wynne caught for the Majestic Radio Team in its game with St. Mary's Celtics in Alexandria Sunday. He was the only Washington player to get a hit off the delivery of Jim Titcomb, Celtic mound ace, who shut out the Majestics, 5 to 0.

The loss of Wynne comes as a sharp blow to Western's championship hopes. The husky football and diamond star topped the individual batting averages in the inter-high series last year by 140 points, hitting an even .800. He maintained that average for 15 nonseries games and played with the Majestics in the summer.

Coach Moore hastened to explain also that his catcher was not aware that he was making himself ineligible, believing that outside baseball could be played without penalty until the start of the interhigh series.

The Western coach criticized sandlot managers for inducing high school boys to play outside games, "especially when they know they are risking their high school careers." He said that Bill Summerbell, Wynne's understudy, would assume the backstop assignment as soon as he recovered from the measles.

Despairing Moments for Nats in Scenes at Home Plate

As Roger Cramer, of the Athletics, stands idly by, Bucky Harris falls to convince Umpire Geisel that Cramer swung at a third strike in the eighth inning. Catcher Bolton's attitude seemingly is one of great disgust.

Jimmy Foxx crosses the plate on his home run in the seventh that drove in two teammates ahead of himself. It was his second homer in two days. Next at bat is Bob Johnson (No. 7), the A's No. 2 slugger.

P. Dean Victor Over Cubs in Duel, 1-0

Medwick's Homer in Sixth One of Cards' 5 Hits Off French.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Brother Paul Dean, handsomely assisted by Joe Medwick, conquered the Chicago Cubs today, 1 to 0, for the first of the 40 victories this season promised by the speaking member of the Dean clan, Brother Dizzy.

Medwick's contribution was a line-smash home run in the sixth inning for the only score of the battle, and Brother Paul didn't need anything else. He gave eight hits, to only five allowed by Larry French, but whenever danger threatened, he had the Cubs popping up or striking out.

2,200 Fans Shiver.

A shivering crowd of 3,200 spectators had hopes that Brother Paul would last no longer than Brother Dizzy did in the opener Tuesday when little Augie Galan shoved off in the Cubs' half of the first inning with a double. He might just as well have been anchored to the bag, however, for Brother Paul fanned Billy Herman and forced Kiki Cuyler and Freddy Lindstrom to pop up to First Baseman Jim Collins.

French singled with one out in the third and after Galan had popped to Frisch, went to third on Billy Herman's single. Brother Paul stopped the threat by again fanning Cuyler. Lindstrom opened the fourth with a single and went to second on Chuck Klein's sacrifice, but Manager Charlie Grimm and Gabby Hartnett could do no better than flies to Durocher and Rothrock.

After Galan beat out a bunt to open the eighth and continued to second when Pepper Martin's low throw went clear to the Cardinal dugout, Dean put the pop-up ball

Tigers' 2 Runs In Ninth Beat White Sox

Bridges Is Pounded for 12 Blows, Goes Route; Goslin a Hero.

DETROIT, April 18 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers defeated the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 4, today and drove the first nail into what they hope will be their ladder to the 1935 American League championship.

The Tigers had many chances to score, but it was not until Joe Vance walked Manager Cochrane in the ninth with the bases loaded, to force in Pete Fox, that they were able to chalk up the deciding run.

Bridges Is Pounded.

Bridges pitched for Detroit, allowing 12 hits, one of them a homer by Radcliff in the third with no one on base. Les Tietje opened for the Sox and worked for five innings, during which he walked seven men and was touched for hits by eight. Vance allowed five hits and five passes, including the one which gave the Tigers their victory.

The Tigers led the Sox 3 to 2 at the end of the seventh but Chicago tied it up in the eighth on a fielder's choice and singles by Radcliff and Hayes, and then went ahead to take a one-run lead in the ninth when Washington doubled and scored on Appling's single.

The Goose Helps.

Goslin's single and Walker's double brought in the tying run. Then Owen walked and Walker stole third when Bridges fanned. The Tiger right fielder strained a muscle on the play and was supplanted by Fox. Owen advanced to second on a wild pitch and Jo Jo White drew a pass to load the bases. This set

Rookie Pettit Checks Foe's Hopes, Fanning 5 in Last Two Innings

Takes Mound After Two Mates Fail; Two On, Foxx Hits Homer.

By Shirley Povich.

LEFTY LEON PETTIT, rescued from the wilds of Chattanooga this season by the Nats' need of pitching, expressed his gratitude yesterday by lifting the Washington Club to the top of the American League standings.

Again the Athletics had their Jimmy Foxx and his home run, this time with two on base, but the Nats had Pettit with the pitching guile learned in ten years of minor league service, and they won the ball game by the squeamish figures of 6 to 5.

PETTIT.

Pettits' introduction to the big leagues was short and sweet. Dropped into the middle of a Philadelphia rally in the eighth inning, the little left-hander pitched 20 balls, 16 of 'em strikes, fanning three of the five men who faced him and preserving the Nats' one-run lead to the finish.

The Nats zoomed to the top of the league by their second straight victory coincident with the Red Sox's 4-0 defeat by the Yankees and the White Sox's 5-4 loss to the Tigers.

Hadley Pounded in Seventh.

Irving Hadley went into the seventh inning holding a 6-1 lead over the Athletics and came out of it with only a one-run advantage as Foxx climaxed the A's rally with a terrific home-run drive into the center field bleachers with Hooks and Cramer on base.

With Hadley obviously tiring, Manager Bucky Harris called on Ed Linke to stem the A's assault in the eighth and Linke failed to survive the inning. Although Williams' single and walks to Warstler and Hooks filled the bases with two out, Harris tolerated Linke's presence until he had pitched one ball to Roger Cramer.

Then it was that the Nats' manager motioned into the bull pen, and the diminutive figure of Pettit shuffled toward the mound to introduce himself to the big leagues

C. V. Whitney's Today, Derby Candidate, Victorious at Graw

Colt Outruns Two Rivals In Stretch

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE Race Track, April 18.—The light blue and brown of the C. V. Whitney stable is batting 1.000 in Maryland racing as the result of an impressive performance by Today, a son of Whichone and Afternoon, in the Edgewood, a 6-furlong feature of today's program here on the banks of the Susquehanna River.

Today, a candidate for the Kentucky Derby, was making his 1935 debut, and so were the colors of young Whitney. The colt made a dent in his odds for the Blue Grass classic by the manner in which he disposed of six upper-crust sprinters.

In fact, the real contest in the race was for second honors, and these went to Nautch, from the Howe Stable, which outfooted the Vanderbilt Stable's Bachelor Dinner in the battle to the wire.

The Whitneyite won by four lengths and in the field were three other Derby eligibles. They were Nautch, Bachelor Dinner and Tutticurio.

Today, winner of only one race last year, has filled out and appears to have the punch necessary for Derby consideration. "Sonny" Workman was in charge of the saddle work and, although the colt did not break alertly, the Capital boy made no mistakes. He restrained his charge while Bachelor's Dinner and Nautch ran head-and-head to set a swift pace.

Rounding the far turn, Workman began to let out and Today went up on the outside to gain steadily, pass and then without apparent effort, draw away from Nautch and Bachelor Dinner. Workman was only steering at the finish, but the time of 1:12 1-5 was the best for 6 furlongs during the meeting.

A bright sun and a diminishing northwest wind served to make the day the most comfortable of the week. The largest crowd to date, some 9,000, was in attendance. There was a mixture of long shots and favorites and a good time was had by all—the winners.

After a long delay at the post, Starter Milton finally rang the bell to send a carload of cheap maidens on a trip around the mile and 70-yard course. The winner was Gold Standard, which ran himself into condition working out with Commonwealth, the Derby candidate. Gold Standard was held just off the pace until Ten Law quit and then went to the front to win handily. Royal Command was second and Sou'wester third. Gold Standard was a favorite at $4.70, was saddled by Preston Burch, Washington trainer. Lealette tossed Jockey Sammy Renick when the break came and galloped to the wire in front of the field.

Favorite players made it two in a row when Drawn Sword won the second race from a field of juveniles. Squawker was second and Otway third in the field of 11. The winner, a son of Victorian, drew out in front when straightened out in the stretch and easily held Squawker safe. The veteran jockey, Charley Kurtsinger, had the leg up on the colt, the property of Mrs. Silas B. Mason.

Deflate Shows Form.

J. P. Jones, who has a habit of putting over long shots at this track, uncovered a flashy juvenile in the third race and one that never left the result in doubt. At a $34.10 mutuel, Deflate sank the hopes of the choice players under a hustling ride by Jockey "Mouse" Peters. The daughter of Meridian led Flower Show and Galla to the wire. It was the fastest 2-year-old effort of the meeting, the filly being clocked in 0:53 4-5.

The Howe Stable answered the questions asked about the scratching of Sang Froid by sending Kate, a stablemate, out to win the fifth race from Enthusiasm and Dokas, with Boston Brook fourth. The 5-year-old mare, making her first start, was driven hard by Bobby Merritt. Her condition was no secret, however, and she paid a $5.20 mutuel.

Xandra upset the dope in the sixth race by running an excellent race under the handling of Joe Renick. Speedmore was second and Abbott's Last was third in the battle to the wire. The pay-off was $61.50.

Revonah won the last race from Inferno Lad and Standout by the simple method of staying in front all the way.

Drinmore Lad Due To Race in Britain

Expected to Be Sent Abroad After April 27 Event.

By the Associated Press.

Middleburg, Va., April 18.—Paul Mellon's Drinmore Lad, the sensational winner of yesterday's Covert, a mile and a half turf event of the Middleburg race meeting, seemed destined today to return to the land of his fathers.

The Lad, an Irish bred hunter, will compete in the Maryland Hunt cup, April 27, and then probably will go to the British Isles, Jim Ryan announced. Ryan, gentleman rider who pilots many Mellon-owned mounts, said Drinmore Lad's owner was in England now making plans for entering the big gelding in several British meets.

Yesterday Drinmore Lad came in two lengths ahead of Mrs. Lucy Lyons Stone's Starwink to win the Covert. He shared honors with The Prophet, a Flying Horse farm entry, who won the featured Glenwood, three miles over timber.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLD STANDARD, $4.70, $4.60, $3.10; ROYAL COMMAND, $10.60, 15.80; SOU'WESTER, $3.30.

GOLD STANDARD, rated close to the leaders until leaving the back stretch, took command under pressure, then withstood a long drive in the last three-sixteenths to stall off ROYAL COMMAND. The latter, in the thick of contention from the beginning, challenged strongly midway of the final turn, was bothered slightly by the riderless LEOLETTE and fought it out stubbornly all during the closing strides when clear. SOU'WESTER was on the outside while holding a contending position, but could not threaten in the closing test. COURT GOSSIP was racing strongly in the late stages. QUEEN HELEN weakened gradually after being displaced. VOLGADALE was unable to enter contention. CANIMAR was shuffled back early and was never a factor. TITIAN KIDDIE had brief early speed.

SECOND RACE—Four and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 3:18. Off at 3:21. Winner, Mrs. S. B. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DRAWN SWORD, $5.30, $3.10, $2.80; SQUAWKER, $4.10, $3.50; OTWAY, $10.80.

DRAWN SWORD, quick to settle into his best stride, moved clear when reaching the turn, was placed to punishment midway of the home stretch and held SQUAWKER safe nearing the finish. SQUAWKER worked her way up gradually, responded to pressure and came resolutely in the closing drive. OTWAY went promiscuously placed and held on willingly in the closing test. ROYAL BALLARD was squeezed back when the start came, recovered quickly to move up on the outside, swerved out badly entering the home stretch, but came strongly when straightened out. DIXIE DORA displayed nice speed in the early stages, but tired when urged. SIGHTING BAR met with early interference and fell back steadily. The others were never dangerous.

THIRD RACE—Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:50. Off at 3:55½. Winner, J. P. Jones' ch. f. (2), by Meridian—Ha'penny. FLOWER SHOW, forced to race on the outside, responded to punishment and closed with good courage. GALLA, outrun for the first three furlongs, swung wide into the stretch and closed gamely. JOHN TIO was under stout pressure from the beginning and had no excuses. CANROCK was hard ridden, but could not engage the leaders. SURRY broke well, but lacked early speed. BALLAD SINGER weakened steadily after the first three furlongs. OLD DOMINION had speed during the opening sixteenth. The others were unable to threaten.

NAUTCH, rated close to BACHELORS DINNER in the first half-mile while saving ground, was placed to a hard drive when reaching the home stretch, but was no match for the winner. BACHELORS DINNER, reaching the home stretch, but was no match for the winner. BACHELORS DINNER had nice speed while setting the pace, but was not good enough to maintain his position when put to a drive. CRISTATE could not make up any ground in the late stages. KATE, in good form and kept within striking distance of the leaders in the early racing, responded strongly when shaken up, swung to the outside of the pacemaker during the stretch drive and was up in the last sixteenth. ENTHUSIASM displayed keen speed to open up a good lead in the first half-mile, saved ground, but could not resist the winner after being placed to punishment. DOKAS went forwardly while finding room on the inside and held on gamely in the closing issue. BOSTON BROOK, in tight quarters early, was taken back to find racing room, then came gamely when clear. SPEEDMORE wore FLAMING MAMIE down early to take a long lead, steadied along until reaching the home stretch and held on well when challenged. ABBOTTS LAST, slow to settle in his stride, moved up fast in the last half-mile while losing ground, but hung after getting on almost even terms with leaders in the last furlong. CHARTRES went forwardly, saved ground, and had no excuses. SLIPPER KING faltered after making his move at the final turn. PRINCE ABBOT failed to rally when called on. FLAMING MAMIE stopped.

HAVRE DE GRACE RACE TRACK, April 18.—Before an audience of owners, trainers, stable hands and clockers, Commonwealth, the Kentucky Derby hope of Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, proved that he is ready for his season's debut here in the $7,500 Chesapeake on Saturday by working a mile an an eighth handily in 1:37.

It is seldom that one horse can command the attention of the small army of employes at a race track, especially shortly after sunrise. This morning the track was cleared and the rail was lined with persons anxious to see for themselves the condition of the colt which Washington has an especial interest in, due to the fact that he is trained by Preston Burch, of the Capital.

Colt Draws Away.

Ridden by an exercise boy, Commonwealth broke from the eighth pole with Martial Law, a 3-year-old, and Painted Lady. Jockey Al Tryon was at the paddock turn with the colt Firestone, Commonwealth drew away from Martial Law approaching the turn and Tryon took Firestone out alongside the Derby colt.

Commonwealth was under wraps most of the way, but the boy let him out around the far turn and the son of Bostonian burst away from his stablemate. Trainer Burch waved to the riders to draw in as they reached the stretch and Commonwealth coasted to the wire.

The times were: uarter, 0:24 2-5; three-eighths, 0:36 3-5; half, 0:49; five-eighths, 1:03 1-5; three-quarters, 1:16; seveneighths, 1:29 2-5; mile, 1:43, and mile and an eighth, 1:57.

Commonwealth has grown heavier since last fall, but horsemen say that he will be ready to run his race Saturday.

Morgan to Meet Rudy Dusek Here

Tex Morgan, a 260-pound cowboy from the wild and wooly West, will make his debut locally in support of the Little Wolf-Garibaldi wrestling feature next Thursday night at the Auditorium, it was announced last night.

Currently a heavy favorite in Philadelphia and New York, Morgan faces the well-known acid test as he works out with Rude Rudy Dusek. A win over the dean of the Duseks would just about 'make' the titanic Texan.

Returned from a flying visit to New York, where he lined up several major shows for the near future and the approaching open-air season, Promoter Joe Turner yesterday was enthusiastic over his signing of Little Wolf and Garibaldi.

Tech High Trackmen Triumph Over Episcopal Team, 82-45

Two School Marks Are Eclipsed

Hoxton Is Victor in 440; Locals' Relay Squad Clocked in 3:29.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 18.—Tech High School, 1934 ruler of the Capital area's scholastic track and field realm, resumed where it left off last year by crushing Episcopal High, 82 to 45, here today. By reason of its overwhelming victory over Eastern High Monday, Episcopal had established itself as the only serious threat in or near Washington to Tech's throne, but Coach Hap Hardell's Maroon-clad speedsters quickly displayed that they are in a class by themselves.

Episcopal salvaged no little consolation from the debacle, however, when Flick Hoxton, lightning-footed quarter-mile ace, flashed over the 440 in 50.4 seconds, the fastest time for the distance ever turned in in this section by a schoolboy. Hoxton led Byron Heyden, bespectacled Tech star, to the wire by yards.

Another performance almost as sensational as Hoxton's achievement came in the final event in which Tech's mile relay team of George Bogan, Monroe Emmerich, Hayden and LeRoy Green were clocked in 3:29. It was the second school record set during the day.

Get 10 Points Each.

Episcopal was no match as a team against Tech in the running events, though showing plenty of power in the field events. Bogan and Emmerick each contributed 10 points apiece, Bogan winning the 100 and 220 yard dashes and Emmerick the high and low hurdles. Art Bryant, an Alexandria boy, and one of the outstanding weight men of the season, grabbed a double victory for Episcopal, winning both the discus and shot put.

The victory gave Tech a record for the indoor and outdoor season which wipes out the prediction that the Maroon may not have as powerful a team as the miracle aggregation of last year. Tech won the Southern Interscholastic championships at the University of Virginia in an indoor meet two months ago. Last year, the "miracle" team downed Episcopal, 80½ to 47½.

Monetary 'Double' Hunch Is Wasted

By a Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, April 18.—There is no daily double at the race track here, but, had there been one, it would have been a monetary proposition and there is no telling how many would have played the hunch. The winners of the first and third races, those used in the "doubles" at other tracks, were Gold Standard and Deflate. Gold Standard was "off" in the first flight and Deflate showed a "high" turn of speed. The horses paid $4.70 and $34.10, respectively.

Hagerstown has announced that a daily double will be operated at its meeting next month.

Little Wolf, Garibaldi To Feature Mat Card

Women's Fencing Events Fail To Add Much to Lassies' Cause

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 18.—The women's national fencing championships, conducted at the Fencers Club here last night, managed to develop one moment of high drammer when a skinny, pert, devil-may-care girl threatened to dethrone the Helen Wills of fencing for a few exciting minutes, but, all in all, it did not particularly advance the cause of those who maintain that the gals have an important place in sport.

All in all, the women were pretty bad fencers, wore funny clothes, stuck out in funny places and for 2½ hours gave a poor imitation of the grace, speed, finesse and occasional fury of gentleman swordsmen.

There were two good fencers on the strips during the evening. One was the German girl and champion, Miss Helene Mayer, and the other a Brooklyn girl, the one who gave Miss Mayer her big scare, Miss Dorothy B. Locke. The rest of them stamped their feet, slashed with their stickers and made funny noises, but otherwise contributed little to the sweet science of foilsmanship.

It was good clean fun, at times, even though the fencing was poor. I imagine that the public would have enjoyed seeing the gals flying at one another, but, for some unexplained reason, a national championship was conducted in a tiny fencing club that accommodated no more than 100 or so persons, instead of a hotel ballroom or some large room which would entertain a crowd.

La Mayer is worth going far to see. She is a big girl with a big bun of soft, blonde hair at the back of her head, a bun that keeps coming uncoiled at the crucial moments. In repose she looks stolidly and sweetly Germanic. In action she is a ball of fire of temperament and excitement, and she is a beautiful workman.

Fencing round robin last night, she didn't lose a bout all evening and finished many of them off 5-0 with such speed and ease that the contending lassies looked like raw beginners. She flashed in and touched them on direct attack, or caught them on the riposte (counter) with blinding speed. She simply swept through the contenders just the way Helen Wills used to do until she met funny little Miss Locke, who looks like Colleen Moore, and fences with a funny, whimsical look on her face, and is as tricky as a mongoose.

Miss Mayer had Miss Locke 4-1 in about three minutes and it looked like a walkover. Five touches constitute a bout. I think the German girl then got a little careless, which may have been what Dorothy wanted, because in equally quick time she stabbed her three times and brought the score up to 4-4 and sudden death. The next touch would end it. And what had been merely an interesting exhibition suddenly turned into as tense a fight as I have ever seen on any field or floor.

The little room, packed to suffocation, suddenly grew dead quiet, so that you could hear the breathing of the girls, and the catlike falls of their feet on the strip. Miss Locke was in full-length black velvet trousers with a white vest, and Miss Mayer wore a white linen fencing skirt and vest. Miss Mayer was large and powerful, Miss Locke slim and slippery. The ends of their blades shivered delicately against one another one moment, and the next clashed furiously in attack and counter attack.

There were two vicious engagements with a touch. Then Miss Locke lunged and apparently landed, but the judges didn't catch it, or the point was not sufficiently cleanly made to register with them. On a vote of four judges and a referee, it was ruled that she had not touched. They faced again, and this time the champion whipped in with such speed that Miss Locke never had a chance. The Brooklyn girl shook off her mask and acknowledged the final touch even before the judges gave their decision.

Most of the girls weren't such good sports. A lot of them beefed to the judges. One married woman in a fit of petulancy at a decision that went against her snapped her blade on the floor, breaking it. Then she turned and bawled out the judge, who just grinned at her. The prettiest of the lady fencers is a Mrs. Bela DeTuscan, an American girl, the wife of a Hungarian Army officer and fencing champion. Most business-like of the girls is Marion Lloyd, who could beat them all if she could control her nerves during a bout. Miss Lloyd is a great gymnasium fencer, but goes to pieces on the floor.

Track Trials Held At Allegany High

Schedule for Season Is Announced.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 18.—Coach Foy A. Curry, track and field mentor at Allegany High School, ran off trials in the half-mile run and the 100-yard dash yesterday on the Campobello Athletic Field.

Veterans won both events when Donald Buckle galloped home the winner in the 880 and Lamar Minnick sprinted over the finish line first in the century. Bill Schaidt took second place and Charley Golden was third in the half-mile event in which ten distance runners participated.

Allegany's schedule:

April 27—Chamber of Commerce meet, here.

May 4—University of Maryland, meet, College Park; 11, open (dual meet with Hagerstown sought); 18, C. V. A. League meet, Winchester, Va.; 25, city meet La-Salle and Penn, here; 31, county championship meet, here.

June 7—State championship meet, Baltimore.

two years and managed to get into the final flight, chews gum so fast all the time she fences that it wiggles her mask. It takes five men to judge a fencing bout. The trick is for the spectator to see around them. After each flurry they hold a committee meeting, reviewing each move and decide whether there has been a touch or not. Miss Mayer is in school in California right now, but she wants to fence on the Olympic team for Germany. The two best American girl fencers today are still Miss Locke and Miss Lloyd. The two best prospects are Miss Allessandroni and Mrs. DeTuscan. Miss Allessandroni is a southpaw, which makes it even tougher to beat her.

Long Island U. Wins From Virginia

Special Dispatch to The Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 18.—Collecting eleven hits off of two twirlers, Long Island University's nine won from Virginia here today, 5 to 2, in a clean fielding game.

Capt. Norton, on mound for the New Yorkers, held the Cavaliers safe at all times, yielding only five hits, four of which were for extra bases. Male contributed a home run. Cowgill made a triple and MacFarlane and Davidson two-baggers.

Davidson, making his season's debut for Virginia, was touched for four hits in the fourth and gave way to Abbitt, who was scored on in only one frame, the seventh, when Penna's long drive sent Miller and Rabinawitz across.

Navy Crews Leave To Meet Columbia

33 Men Make Trip for Contests Tomorrow.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, April 18.—Ready for their first test of the year, Naval Academy crews left Annapolis today for New York for a regatta with Columbia University sweepsters on the Harlem Saturday afternoon. The party numbered 30, and was made up of varsity, junior varsity and freshmen eights, and they will row against corresponding crews of the Lions.

The Middy bladesmen were reported in good shape by their coach, Charles S. (Buck) Walsh. Notwithstanding the fact that early spring practice has been greatly hampered by continued routh weather, Saturady's brushes should give the mentor a good line on his charges, in view of races to come later, including the Adams Cup event, in May, a regatta with Cornell crews, both to be rowed on Severn River, and the Poughkeepsie classic in June, in which they will enter Varsity and Jayvee boats.

Wrestling Matches Staged at Clarksburg

Tar Heel Track Title Periled By Terps

Duke Also Seen Threat; N. C. U. Meets Virginia Team Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., April 18.—With the annual Southern conference track meet just a month away, North Carolina's champions, looking beyond Saturday's meet with Virginias Cavaliers whom they are favored to defeat, today saw signs of trouble on the northern front.

Maryland's Old Liners, lacking the all-around strength boasted by the Tar Heels, have a cluster of stars who may cut heavily into the scoring in the Southern Conference meet. The veteran Earl Widmyer, sprint sensation, and Bill Guckeyson, a handy man with the weights and javelin, head the small but able array of first class Maryland talent.

Moreover, Duke's Blue Devils with another strong team are awaiting a chance to upset the Tar Heels, while the University of Virginia will put a well-balanced team, headed by the great Everett, star hurdler and broad jumper, in the tournament.

Although bad weather has prevented top-notch performances in early meets this spring, Maryland's aces showed enough class to guarantee them the respect of championship contenders. The fleet Widmyer, one of the Nation's outstanding collegiate sprinters, already has tied the conference record of 9.8 seconds in the century and is turning in better than creditable times in the furlong.

With North Carolina's great Ralston Legore graduated, Guckeyson will be the odds on choice to win the conference javelin event. He has thrown the spear 203 feet 4 inches and if he can improve this mark with practice will be aiming at Legore's record of better than 211 feet. In addition, he is one of the best performers in the conference with the discus and an almost sure point scorer in the shot.

North Carolina, on the basis of a well-rounded team, probably would be favored to whip any school in the conference in a dual meet but in a conference tournament, with stars from several schools cutting into the scoring, a dark horse may gallop to victory.

In addition to Widmyer and Guckeyson, the Marylanders boast a first-class middle distance runner in Coleman Headley and a fine broad jumper in Bob Slye.

Sloppy weather kept the Tarheels from appearing to their best advantage in their early meet with William and Mary and Virginia's Cavaliers did not extend themselves in whipping V. M. I. the other day but both will have to show their best performances in the Saturday meet at Chapel Hill.

Maryland should find V. M. I. fairly easy at Lexington, Duke should take Washington and Lee into camp at Durham while Clemson and South Carolina are expected to put up a good scrap at Columbia.

Mid-Atlantic Pros Vie May 6 for Places in Japanese Matches

Nippon Team Plays Here On June 2

Dickey and Calfee Win in Rotary Tourney; Other Links News.

By Dave Herman.

CLASS A members of the Middle Atlantic Professional Golf Association will qualify on May 6 at Kenwood for the six-man team which will oppose the Japanese professional stars at the same course in an international match June 2.

Play will be over the 36-hole route, with the six-low scorers to make up the personnel of the American team.

Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond's famous pro, will head the Virginia delegation seeking places on the team. The dynamic Wee Scot, three times on the threshold of the National Open championship, is well acquainted with the Kenwood layout, having won last year's National Capital Open with a record 54-hole score of 208.

Virginians Eligible.

Other Virginians eligible to compete are Benny Loving, Farmington; Clyde DePishon, Quantico, and Tommy Ryan, Belle Haven. Eligible from Washington and Baltimore are the following: Al Houghton, Kenwood; Mel Shorey, East Potomac; Walter Cunningham, Burning Tree; Gene Larkin, Woodmont; Al Treder, Maor; George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring; Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam; Tony Sylvester, Bannockburn; Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase; Leo Walper, Bethesda; Glenn Spencer, Maryland Country Club; Carrol MacMaster, Woodholme; Alex Taylor, Rolling Road; Charlie Betschler, Hillendale Jimmy Flattery, Rodgers Forge; Ralph Beach; Bill Schrieber, Clifton Park; Johnny Bass, Mount Pleasant; Frank Invernezzi, Sparrows Point.

The Japanese pros will arrive in America next week. Their first match is with the Portland P. G. A. members April 30.

V. Calvert Dickey, veteran host club player, shot a little above his average game yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club's course, but his 80 was good enough to win medal honors in the Rotary Club's first golf tournament of the season.

Ten strokes over par for the 18 holes, the lanky Dickey shot the first nine in 39, and took 41 blows coming home. First low net prize went to Peyton W. Calfee, who posted 85-11—74. Calvert Bowie took second prize by virtue of his 89-14—75.

Rudolph T. Harrell and Charlie Doing, sr., were too hot for a quartet composed of Bob Albertus, former Philadelphia champion; Martin Weigend, Kenneth Parkinson and Bob Polk yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club. Leading 1 up at the turn, Harrell and Doing scored a best ball of 31, four under par, to smoke out their opponents, 3 and 2. Harrell contributed a 74, with a 34 on the incoming side, shooting birdies at the eleventh, fifteenth and seventeenth.

Harrell's incoming score:
4 2 4 5 4 4 4 3 4—34

If District golf clubs plan to enter players in the Southern Amateur scheduled in Richmond June 18, they had better do so today, for today is the deadline for joining the association, Billy Howell, member of the Southern board, said yesterday. Thus far Army and Navy Country Club is the lone club from the Washington area to join. Among the Virginia clubs who signed up recently are Boonesboro, of Lynchburg and Woodberry Forest, Va.

Chevy Chase Club members are turning in scores daily for the French High Commission Cup tournament, which will have its first round of match play April 29, 30, May 1. Thirty-two low net scores will qualify between now and April 27.

Clyde DePishon, the red-haired pro from the Quantico (Va.) Marines golf course, who has been playing considerable golf around the District of late, shot a 78 at Beaver Dam in an informal match with Cliff Spencer. The host pro won with a 37-38—75, three over par.

Congressional Country Club will be host to the District women's first teams next Tuesday, while on Monday the second teams will resume their feud at Indian Spring.

Augusta Nine Defeats Mt. St. Josephs, 9 to 6

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Augusta Military Academy, Va., April 18.—The Augusta Military Academy defeated Mount St. Josephs, of Batlimore, at Claybold this afternoon, 9 to 6. Davis, on the mound for the Cadets, allowed the Catholic boys only four scattered hits in the eight innings he worked, but errors and wildness were responsible for the runs.

Worten, Cadet second sacker, led both teams with a double and two singles, while Keegen, of Augusta, and Bouse, of the visitors, each hit triples.

His 215-Pound Friend Gets in His Teeth, But Mr. Auto-Record Gives an Interview

By Bill McCormick.

"NISS new car um mine'll do hunner' se'nty-fi' mi 'n hour," insisted Ab Jenkins, the gray-haired man who holds more automobile world records than any other man in the history of the sport.

What Mr. Jenkins was trying to convey was that his new car would do 175 miles an hour, but he was greatly hampered by a leather belt which he was holding between his teeth. Suspended on the other end of the belt was a 215-pound friend whom Ab was lifting from the floor with his teeth, just to prove that he was entitled to the designation of "iron man" which has been hung on him.

"I really set 94 records last August," insisted Ab, dropping the 215-pound friend to the floor with a resounding squash, "But the A. A. A. has listed only 52 of them. They have not listed the American unlimited records."

A careful check of the official A. A. A. record of the Jenkins trials with a Pierce Arrow on the Utah salt beds last summer revealed that Ab actually had set 94 records in the 3,487½-mile drive. Thirty-two of the records were American class B records, 32 were American unlimited records and 30 were A. I. A. C. R. and American class B records. For the benefit of the uninitiated, it may be explained that A. I. A. C. R. is an abreviation for Association Interhational Auto Clubs Recognized, or international recognized records to the fraternity.

"I'm making another run for a flock of records in June," explained Ab, as he rummaged through a pile of pictures for a shot of his new car. "The run will be made on the Utah salt beds, of course, and in this Duesenberg, which I built myself."

Without too much coaxing, Jenkins was persuaded to confess that the Duesenberg pictured on this page was designed by himself and built at a cost of $21,000. The chassis set him back $11,500, the sheet metal work that makes it the streamlined dream it is cost $4,500, and the rest is in the motor, which is capable of developing from 320 to 400 horsepower.

Jenkins' new car is painted a bright yellow with orange upholstery and specially built tires of the same color. As pictured here, it resembles nothing so much as a custom-built sports roadster, which it is, but the fenders can be knocked off at a minute's notice, streamlined panties clamped over the wheels, and it becomes a first-class record-breaking piece of machinery.

Jenkins isn't exactly certain what he will do with the Duesenberg after he breaks his records this summer, but thinks he will take it to California and sell it to some movie star.

Jenkins, the iron man of motordom, has made many record runs which required hours and hours of sleeplessness. In 1926, in setting a transcontinental record from New York to San Francisco, he drove continuously for 86 hours 20 minutes.

In 1927, Ab covered the same route in 77 hours 40 minutes. In 1931 he drove from Gotham to the Golden Gate in 54.1 hours, without rest. As we left him he was yawning.

"I'm as tired as I can be," he yawned. "Been driving since noon in all this Washington traffic, and am I tired!"

Seven Home Runs As Phils Win, 10-9

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 18.—The Phillies cut down two big Brooklyn leads by the simple method of walloping more home runs than their rivals and defeated the Dodgers, 10 to 9, in the tenth inning today to even the series at one game all.

They caught up after trailing 5 to 0 and went into the ninth three runs behind, tying the count when George Watkins drove the seventh homer of the game into the stands with two on base. In the tenth Johnny Vergez doubled, went to third on an infield out and scored the winning run on Mickey Haslin's pinch hit.

Johnson Sees Little Value In Ruth

'Big Train' Counts Friend Out as Factor to Boston Braves.

ST. LOUIS, April 18 (AP).—Not unkindly, but calmly, dispassionately, the veteran Walter Johnson today counted Babe Ruth out as a serious playing factor for the Boston Braves this year.

"Yes, I'm afraid my old friend, Babe Ruth, is through as a player and doesn't know it," said the Cleveland manager who, during 20 years of active baseball, gained a reputation as one of the greatest of all pitchers.

"That he can be of value to the Braves on the playing field is almost too hard to believe."

Johnson recalled the season of last year, "when the heat was on," as the basis for his opinion that the Babe "can't be of real help" to the Braves. "He couldn't field, he couldn't run and, speaking strictly from what I saw, my young pitchers gave him plenty of trouble with deliveries in there under the belt."

French pitched what ordinarily would have been winning baseball. Medwick and Virgil Davis singled with two out in the third, but Durocher flied out. Frisch started the fourth with a double and Collins drew a pass in the fourth, but Davis popped out to end the inning.

Reds Pound Four Pirates in 9-4 Win

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, April 18.—Big Jim Weaver's debut as a Pirate hurler was spoiled today by the hustling Cincinnati Reds, who chased him to the showers in less than two frames and continued their cannonade against his four successors to defeat Pittsburgh, 9 to 4.

Weaver's wild pitch in the second inning with the bases filled permitted two runs to score.

The Pirates also chased the starting Red pitcher, Hollingsworth, with a two-run attack in the fourth, and Herrmann, who went to the rescue, was in turn relieved in the sixth by Frey after Pittsburgh scored two more.

The Reds merged eight hits in the fifth and sixth rounds to clinch the game, their second victory in two days, both scored at the expense of the two pitchers Pittsburgh secured from Chicago in exchange for Larry French.

Pettit Is Hero As Nats Top A's, 6-5

Taking up the pitching duties, Pettit calmly threw three strikes past Cramer to end the inning in applause from the second-day crowd of 3,500.

If it was luck, Pettit's good fortune appeared to be short-lived when Moses, first up in the ninth, beat out a hit to Buddy Myer to place the tying run on base with the heavy hitters of the A's batting order awaiting their turn.

Strikes Out Foxx in Ninth.

But, apparently, it wasn't luck. Facing Jimmy Foxx, who had connected for a single and a home run against Hadley, Pettit slipped a perfect third strike past Foxx—a screw ball that sideswiped the corner of the plate.

Next to contend with was Bob Johnson, the No. 2 slugger of the A's. Johnson didn't even foul one. The third strike came breezing over the plate as Johnson stood with his bat on his shoulder, a strike so perfect that there was not the semblance of a squawk from the Philadelphia bench.

Eric McNair finally hit one of Pettit's screw-balls—a soft liner to Travis, who pocketed the ball as is customary with the fellow who makes the last out of the game.

Hadley's hitting was more of an asset to the Nats than his pitching. He drove in the first three runs of the ball game. In the second inning, after Travis had led off with a single against Johnny Marcum and Bolton had walked, Hadley looped a two-base hit into left field to score both.

Drives in Third Run.

He drove in the Nats' third run in the fourth inning with a single to center field that followed Cliff Bolton's double, and thus staked himself to a 3-to-1 lead.

The A's had finally solved him for a run in the fourth when Johnson's double scored Cramer, who had singled.

Marcum was subjected to further punishment in the fifth when the Nats boosted their lead to 6-1. Stone was on base when Travis singled to left and Kuhel scored both of 'em with a slashing double to left. Bolton banged a single to right that scored Kuhel.

The cluster of four runs that rolled off the A's bat in the seventh were inspired by Lyn Larry's error on Warstler's hard-hit ground ball. Pitcher Marcum prolonged the rally with a single to center. Hooks forced Marcum at second, Warstler scoring on the play and Cramer continued the offensive by bashing a single into center.

It was at this point that Foxx picked out one of Hadley's pitches, with the count three balls and one strike, and rammed his second home run of the season into the bleachers to reduce the Nats' lead to one run.

Terps' Early Lead Erased as Generals Pound Out 10 Hits.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Va., April 18.—Washington and Lee batters found the offerings of three Maryland hurlers much to their liking today and handed the Terps a 9-to-3 licking.

The Generals, behind the sturdy pitching of Joe Pette, garnered 10 hits, while the visitors collected 7, all in the first five innings.

Keller, Maryland center-fielder, tripled in the first to score Stonebraker and later crossed the plate on Howerton's error to give the visitors an immediate lead. Washington and Lee, however, pushed across three runs in the weird first, Mattox, Howerton and Short crossing the plate.

Merriman Goes In.

Merrimam went in for Physioc in the third after Mattox had scored again in the second, and held the Generals until the sixth, when Mattox and Moore scored. Farrell was sent in to stem the tide, but Pullen got on as a result of Stonebraker's wild throw in the eighth and tallied in front of Mattox when Field got his third hit of the game. Iler hit safely and Field scored.

Sothoron scored Maryland's third run in the fourth on Keller's single, but after that Pette settled down and allowed only one more hit. He struck out eight.

212 Marathon Runners to Vie In Boston A. A.'s Race Today

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 18.—Those jobs of sport, the patient and long-suffering marathon runners who boast of being 100 per cent amateurs, will torture themselves for some short-lived glory again tomorrow in the thirty-eighth running of the Boston A. A.'s famous race from Hopkinton to its Back Bay clubhouse.

The field numbered 212 when the entry list was officially closed today, thereby assuring a wild mob of 190 or so at the starting line.

Six entries were sent in by famous runners who have accounted for 12 of the last 18 victories.

Marathon running, during the last 20 years, has become such a highly scientific and exacting competition that an unknown's chance of victory are slim. Not more than 14 in the entire field can be ranked as possibilities.

Dave Komonen, the Sudbury (Ontario) mine carpenter, who beat out Arlington's 27-year-old Johnny Kelley last year, is out to repeat. Kelley, who has gained much strength and marathon wisdom since then, probably will start as the favorite, due to his great showing in a recent 20-mile race.

The other five former winners are the middle-aged Clarence Demar, who has won seven of these 26-mile 385-yard cruel and hilly jaunts; Paul DeBruyn, the powerful New York German; Smiling Jimmy Henigan, the brick-laying Bill Kennedy, another oldster, whose triumph came in 1917, and Kelley's outstanding rival; Speedy Leslie Pawson, of Pawtucket, R. I., who set the race's record of 2:31:01 3-5 two years ago.

Prime Issues Head Upturn In Stock Mart

Coca Cola a Feature, Up 10 Points; Union Pacific Rises 4.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—A handful of high-priced issues surged up to lead the market a brisk chase in trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

In brokerage circles it was said the smashing gains scored by some of the pace setters probably represented in part a shifting of funds from low-yield bonds into equities. While most gains were fractional, several issues rose 1 to 11 points. Observers said the buying may have been touched off in some sections by the record low rate of one-fourth of 1 per cent for call money.

That the market was a little tardy in responding to the low call rate established yesterday was taken to reflect Wall street's habit in recent months of thinking things over twice before running into stocks.

By some houses it was reported that a moderate amount of buying from abroad had given zip to the upswing.

Closing share prices showed a gain of 0.7, to 38.8, in terms of the Associated Press average of 60 stocks. The market was a little less active at a total turnover of 816,090 shares, compared with 855,540 shares on Wednesday.

Spectacular advances were scored by a few shares. Always a fast mover owing to limited floating supply, Coca-Cola whirled up with the aid of better earnings for a gain of 10 points to 205. The rise of 6¾ to 133, made by Eastman Kodak brokers found some difficulty in explaining. U. S. Steel preferred rose 1¼ points, Woolworth a point. Du Pont at 97½ had a gain of 3¾. With the exception of Union Pacific, which jumped ahead 4 points, the rails put on an indifferent show.

Corn Is Higher, Wheat Declines

Cotton Closes at Net Gains of 10 to 12 Points After Drop.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 18.—Selling of wheat against purchasing of corn had a logical outcome in the grain markets today—wheat prices went down and corn up.

Scantiness of immediate supplies of corn needed for settlement of Chicago May delivery contracts was the chief motive for buying of corn. On the other hand, reports were more cheerful as to soil conditions in spring wheat territory, where it is expected seeding will now make rapid progress, although somewhat later than normal at present.

Wheat closed easy, ⅛-⅝ under yesterday's finish; May, $1.00-1.00¼; corn, at ¼-1⅛ advance; May, 90⅛-90¼; oats, unchanged to ¼ off, and provisions, 10 to 12 cents down.

Reports of some rain in Kansas and Oklahoma, together with prospects of further moisture Southwest during the next few days, tended to check buying power as to wheat. Weakness of prices for that cereal did not develop, however, until after an advance here which resulted partly from relative firmness of the Liverpool market and partly from Wichita, Kans., advices winter wheat crops showed considerable deterioration the past ten days.

Corn showed strength from the outset. There was a decided paucity of offerings in the speculative pit, and the May quotations moved up briskly, with shorts and longs competing. Ooats took their cue from corn rather than from wheat. Provisions sagged, lard being sold against purchases of cottonseed oil.

Investors Find Easy Money Policy Hurts Their Income Far More Than Dollar Devaluation; Effect Similar to Capital Levy.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 18.—The wave of refunding of higher coupon obligations into bonds bearing a low rate of interest, along with the sharp reduction in rates paid on bank deposits and mortgages, is curtailing severely the income of the creditor classes in this country. While to a large extent the average individual is both a creditor and a debtor, the substantial number of people living chiefly on bond, mortgage or bank interest are now being hard bit by the resulting severe drop in their income.

It has been a consistent contention of the Roosevelt Administration that the deflation in commodity prices since 1929 has vastly increased the burden on the debtor classes, and has correspondingly enriched creditors. This condition was advanced as one of the basic arguments for price "reflation" as a means of reducing the debt burden. Needless to say, there has been a very large measure of truth in contention.

The Administration has adopted two basic measures to reduce the debt burden. The first of these, devaluation of the dollar through a reduction of its gold content by 40.94 per cent, has been most spectacular and has attracted most popular attention. However, this step had quite disappointing results. Commodity prices did not rise in proportion to dollar devaluation. In fact, if the effects of the AAA, the drought and the NRA were eliminated, dollar devaluation would probably be found to have occasioned a relatively insignificant rise in the average level of commodity prices.

Lower Interest Rates Help Redistribute National Income.

A second basic policy of the Administration has been to force interest rates down to unprecedently low levels, chiefly through expanding surplus reserves of member banks with the Federal Reserve Banks. By creating a vast reservoir of excess bank reserves and of new deposits, the surplus of funds seeking investment has been inflated to a point where it consistently depresses interest rates. As a result, Government and private borrowers are able to replace high coupon obligations with others bearing a much lower rate of interest. This is a far more subtle and less spectacular way of aiding the debtor at the expense of the creditor than dollar devaluation, but it is proving infinitely more effective to attain this end. National income is redistributed in favor of the debtor classes as a result.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has pointed out that, as a result of the refunding of some $8,000,000,000 of high coupon debt into low interest bonds and the raising of large amounts of new money through short-term issues giving a low yield, the $28,000,000-000 of Government obligations now outstanding carry a lower aggregate annual interest charge than did the $20,000,000,000 national debt of 1925. Actually, this means that the Federal Government has obtained $8,000,000,000 of additional spending power without paying anything for it, except for a promise to pay in the indefinite future the principal of the new indebtedness. Since the Treasury seems unlikely to redeem any of its debt for a long time to come, the deficit is actually being financed to date primarily at the expense of holders of Government bonds who must be satisfied with a lower and declining rate of interest.

The current wave of corporate refunding is spreading the decline in interest payments to private obligations. Recent refunding operations have resulted in the conversion of obligations with an average rate of interest of about 5½ per cent into those with an average rate of 4 per cent. This spells a reduction in the income from these bonds of institutional and individual holders of from 25 to 30 per cent, and a reduction in the annual burden on the debtors of corresponding amount.

Trust companies report numerous complaints from clients about the dwindling income they are receiving from high grade securities because of the fall in interest rates, which is forcing a number of persons dependent on income from trust funds to lower their living standards. Income from high-grade bonds and first mortgages, it must be remembered, alone resisted the ravages of the depression until now, but it is suffering severe deflation at the present time.

Interest Cut Resembles Capital Levy in Some Ways.

The present severe decline in interest rates, greatly exaggerrated by the Government's credit and monetary policies, has many of the effects of a capital levy. While it leaves the principal of debts unchanged, it is true, these refunding operations cut the carrying charges on a given volume of indebtedness and leave investors a correspondingly smaller income.

Traditionally, such a severe decline in interest rates should cause investors to seek to maintain their return by resorting to more speculative commitments. However, the lessons of the depression are still too fresh in the minds of most investors. They apparently prefer to accept a lower rate of return than to assume greater speculative risks. As a result, the many refunding bond issues recently put out have found a very ready market among holders of the obligations they were designed to refund. Owners of the called high coupon bonds have quite largely turned them in for exchange into the new offerings despite the greatly reduced rate of interest, even though this has meant a slash in yield of anywhere from 20 to 50 per cent in various cases.

Cash Awaits Depositors In Shut Banks

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Nearly 3,500 dividend checks for depositors in the insolvent Northeast and Washington Savings banks have not been claimed, Receiver Norman R. Hamilton announced last night. The last payment declared by the banks involved a 10 per cent payment.

Nearly half of the recently authorized dividend checks for depositors in the defunct Northeast Savings and Washington Savings banks have not been claimed, Receiver Norman R. Hamilton announced last night.

When payment of the dividend was authorized three weeks ago about $1,400,000 in frozen funds was made available to some 8,000 depositors in the defunct banks. At the close of business yesterday there were still about 3,500 dividend checks uncalled for.

Temporary Force off Tomorrow.

Temporary clerks that have been on duty to disburse checks to approved creditors will be released after Saturday noon, Receiver Hamilton asserted last night, and disbursal of the claims will be considerably more difficult after that time.

Depositors in the Northeast Savings Bank may call with their dividend notification and suitable identification at the former bank offices, Eighth and H streets northeast, at any time before tomorrow noon. After that time all disbursals will have to be made through the old District National Bank, at 1406 G street northwest.

Washington Savings Bank depositors have been collecting their dividend from the District National Bank Building and will continue to do so after Saturday.

Northeast Payments 85 Per Cent.

The latest 10 per cent payment brings disbursals of the Northeast Savings Bank up to 85 per cent of $1,070,101 tied up when the bank closed. Further payments of this institution may be defrayed from $62,372 cash on hand and the estimated collectible assets of $395,896.

After payment of an outstanding RFC loan in the neighborhood of $135,000, the expected collections will exceed the amount still due. No recourse has been taken in this bank to the possible 100 per cent stock assessment allowed by law.

Depositors of the Washington Savings Bank will have received 80 per cent of their money with the latest 10 per cent dividend, which will bring payments of this bank to $278,008. For further payments there will be available cash on hand of $20,959, while the estimated collectible assets will net $204,039 of the remaining book assets totaling $320,436. After deduction of an outstanding RFC loan of about $140,000, ample cash should be available to dispose of all claims in full.

Call Rate Reduction.

Reduction of the official call money rate on the New York Stock Exchange to one-quarter of 1 per cent, the lowest figure in history, was widely discussed in local finance circles yesterday.

Virtually every form of money loan has felt the tremendous pressure of accumulated reserves at the banks lately. The drop in the official call money rate was a belated recognition of the fact that supply and demand factors had been at work for a long time in the outside market.

The latest reduction in the call rate will virtually exclude banks outside of New York from the local market there, or else they will have to advance funds for nothing because the one-quarter of 1 per cent will just cover the commission they normally pay the New York banks for handling funds.

Whether the outside banks withdraw their funds from New York or not, there is little likelihood that anything but cheap money will be seen for some time because the New York banks have an ample supply of unused funds of their own on which they are glad to eke out even very small earnings.

Following the drop in the call rate, time loans were reduced in New York again, bringing money up to 90 days down to one-quarter of 1 per cent, and three to six months' funds down to three-eighth of 1 per cent. At the beginning of the week the rate was three-quarters of 1 per cent.

Stock Exchange Holiday.

Today will be observed as a holiday by all leading security and commodity exchanges throughout the United States.

The New York Stock Exchange, whose members sought to extend the holiday through Saturday, has announced, however, that business will be transacted as usual on that day, thus disappointing thousands of brokerage house clerks and other employes who had been looking forward to a three-day vacation.

At the regular quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the Lincoln Service Corporation, industrial bankers, Marcy L. Sperry, president of the Washington Gas Light Co., was elected a member of the board of the corporation. Charles Delmar is president of the company.

Howard H. Hoyt, formerly with the N. W. Ayer Advertising Agency and now Eastern division manager of the United States for Gooderham & Worts, Ltd., was principal speaker at the regular luncheon of the Cosmopolitan Club, held yesterday at the Carlton Hotel.

Theme of Mr. Hoyt's speech was "Advertising and the Liquor Industry."

Bank Officers Attend School.

Three Washington bank officers will be among the 160 representing 32 States and the District of Columbia at the new Graduate School of Banking at Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., when the summer courses open in June.

They are Nelson B. O'Neal, assistant vice president, Riggs National Bank; R. E. Haycock, auditor, and H. T. Bisselle, assistant cashier of the same institution. There are nine bank presidents among those who have registered for the courses.

New England Blames High Tax And Output for Textile Plight

Survey Covers 87 Companies and 105 Mills With 73,505 Workers; Japanese Competition Also Is Considered a Factor.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 18.—Belief that the present plight of the New England cotton textile industry is due to overtaxation as well as overproduction is expressed in a symposium of manufacturers' opinions given out today by the New England Council.

The council conducted a survey among the producers at the request of the chamber of commerce committee on industrial conditions in New England, headed by Frank W. Dunham, of Fall River.

In contrast to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, who yesterday said overproduction, inefficiency and obsolescence are the causes of present conditions, the manufacturers included the processing tax, Japanese competition, North-South wage differential, State legislation and local taxation, as well as overproduction.

The council survey was based on reports from 87 textile companies representing 105 mills and employ-73,500 workers in New England.

Rising Tax Burdens.

"General dissatisfaction was expressed over steadily rising local and State tax burdens," the survey said.

New Hampshire mills favored elimination of the State "stock of process" tax, Massachusetts manufacturers complained of double taxation and Maine owners requested a comprehensive study of the relative tax burden on Maine mills compared to other States.

"A large manufacturer of sheeting stated he had to absorb 43 per cent of the processing tax for the last six months; and the tax has increased the price to the consumer 13 to 19 cents per ordinary size sheet for a double bed," the report said.

Japanese Win Customers.

Of 17 returns concerning foreign competition three said former customers were buying Japanese goods.

One manufacturer said, the survey continued, "Japanese imports have not directly affected our product, but they have indirectly. Certain domestic mills have changed their products to escape Japanese competition and are now competing with ours."

Forty-six returns, the survey said, declared lower wages paid in the South were a serious threat to New England mills. The consensus, the survey added, was that over-all spread between North and South is slightly less now than prior to the code.

So. Cal Edison Net Shows Gain

First Quarter Earnings $4,927,365, or 3% Above a Year Ago.

New York, April 18.—Net operating revenues of the Southern California Edison Co., Ltd., for the first quarter of 1935 totaled $4,927,365, as compared with $4,755,811 in the first quarter of 1934, a gain of more than 3 per cent. Gross revenues of $8,331,374 in the first quarter compare with $7,945,582 in the same period of last year. Power sold in the first quarter totaled 530,164,689 kwh, a gain of 5½ per cent over the same period of 1934. The balance of net earnings, after fixed charges and depreciation in the first quarter, was $2,050,993, as compared with $1,925,570 in the first quarter of 1934.

In commenting on the company's business during the first quarter, Harry J. Bauer, president, stated, "The gain in general industrial activity throughout our territory is reflected in the company's sale of industrial power which in February showed a gain of 16 per cent per horsepower of connected load, as compared with the same month of 1934. All classes of business showed an improvement over 1934, except agricultural power, which was lower because of bounteous rainfalls this year."

The Tide Water Associated Oil Co. and subsidiaries report for the three months ended March 31, 1935, a consolidated net income of $1,220,991 after all charges, reserves and Federal taxes, equal, after dividend requirements on the 636,222 shares of 6 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock outstanding, to 5 cents a share on the 5,631,437 common shares outstanding. For the corresponding period 1934 the company had a profit of $1,430,962, equal, after preferred stock dividend requirements, to 8 cents per common share on the 5,627,577 shares then outstanding.

The Shawinigan Water & Power Co. reports for the first quarter of this year gross revenue of $3,118,975, compared with $2,916,779 for the first three months of 1934. After all expenses and fixed charges, but before depreciation and income tax, surplus for the first quarter amounted to $722,686, compared with $641,016 for the corresponding period last year. In this connection it is explained that published figures for the first quarter of 1934 included deduction of $75,000 for interest on capital cost of work under construction, which deduction was canceled, as explained in the annual report.

Bond Market Holds Steady Before Holiday

C. & N. W. Issues Rally; Governments Make Slight Gains.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 18.—While there were a number of soft spots in today's bond market, the gainers outnumbered the losers and sentiment still seemed to be moderately bullish. In view of the fact that security exchanges will be closed tomorrow for the Good Friday holiday, trading was rather apathetic. The turnover amounted to $10,574,000, par value, against $11,254,000 Wednesday. The Associated Press corporate averages were up .1 to .2 of a point.

There was some selling of secondary rails, following the Chicago & Northwestern interest announcement, but the bonds of this company rallied a point or more, including the 4¾s which advanced 1¾ to 11⅝.

Many of the prime investment industrials were virtually unchanged on the day. United States Government loans were fairly steady, the majority showing gains of 1-32d to 4-32ds of a point.

Bank of France Gold Flows Out

Holdings Off 601 Million Francs in Week.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 18.—The Bank of France, for the second successive week, today reported a loss of gold holdings which dropped from 81,985,000,000 to 81,384,000,000 francs during the week ended April 12. (The franc was quoted today at 6.589 cents.)

This is the lowest point the holdings have reached since August 17, 1934. The drain on gold, which totaled 1,250,000,000 francs during the previous two weeks was attributed by banking circles chiefly to repatriation of Belgian capital, although there have been small shipments to London and New York.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes in francs: Gold decreased 601,000,000, sight balances abroad increased 1,000,000; bills discounted at home increased 64,000,000, bills bought abroad increased 28,000,000, advances decreased 14,000,000, circulation decreased 491,000,000, current accounts decreased 132,000,000, 30-day loans on government collateral decreased 15,000,000. Rate of discount, 2½ per cent.

Bank of England.

London, April 18 (AP).—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes in pounds: Total reserve decreased 4,187,000, circulation increased 4,141,000, bullion decreased 46,000, other securities decreased 852,000, public deposits decreased 69,000, other deposits decreased 3,263,000, notes reserve decreased 4,141,000, government securities increased 1,510,000. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liability is 40.71 per cent, compared with 42.57 last week. Rate of discount 2 per cent.

Member Banks' Deposits Rise

$214,000,000 Transferred by Treasury Due to April Financing.

By the Associated Press.

A transfer of Treasury deposits from Federal Reserve and member banks due to April 15 refinancing caused a sharp increase in member bank reserve balances and an almost corresponding drop in Treasury cash and deposits during the week ended April 17.

The weekly statement of the Reserve banks disclosed that Reserve balances had jumped $214,000,000 during the week, while Treasury cash and deposits with Federal Reserve banks was off $227,000,000.

Monetary gold stock established its weekly new peak, rising $58,000,000 to a total of $8,672,000,000. The weekly statement said:

"The daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding during the week ended April 17, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, was $2,476,000,000, an increase of $15,000,000, compared with the preceding week and a decrease of $28,000,000, compared with the corresponding week in 1934.

"On April 17 total Reserve bank credit amounted to $2,470,000,000, an increase of $7,000,000 for the week. Services Listed In Observance Of Good Friday

Evening Programs to Follow Three-Hour Devotions Starting at Noon

Arriving at Good Friday, Washington churches which have been conducting special services leading to Easter, will commemorate today the most tragic in Christian history—the Crucifixion of Christ.

Attention in most churches is focused on three-hour devotions, beginning at noon. However, there will be evening services in every section of the city. Sermons on the Crucifixion theme and special music will make up the programs.

Solemn religious services in Washington Cathedral will begin at noon, when a three-hour, or Passion, service will begin. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, D. D., Bishop of Washington, will give an address on "The Seven Last Words of Christ." He will be assisted by Canon Raymond L. Wolven, his chaplain, and other members of the clergy staff. The Cathedral choir of men and boys will lead in the singing of Good Friday hymns and interludes.

Services in Three Units.

Services will be divided into three units, beginning at noon, 1 p. m., and at 2 p. m. Worshipers unable to remain for all three parts may enter or leave between units.

A special service entitled "His Last Words" will be conducted in Grace Lutheran Church at 8 p. m. The Rev. Gerhard E. Lenski, pastor, will have charge of the program in which Christ's "Seven Last Words" will be interpreted in word and song.

"Three Crosses" is the Good Friday sermon topic on which the Rev. Charles Enders, pastor, will speak at 10 a. m. in Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church. At 8 p. m. the Concordia Choir will sing Sir John Stainer's "The Crucifixion."

Three-hour devotions will begin at noon in Christ Church, Georgetown, with the Rev. Edward Slater Dunlap, rector, in charge.

Tenebrae to Be Chanted.

At the Church of the Immaculate Conception, "Three Hours Agony" will be conducted by the Rev. Felix M. Kirsch, O. M. "The Way of the Cross" will be said at 5 p. m. Tenebrae services will be chanted by the Friars of the Atonement at 7:45 p. m., with the sermon by the Rev. Paul Bussard.

Washington churches of the Methodist Episcopal denomination will join for three-hour Good Friday services this afternoon in Foundry M. E. Church, Sixteenth and P streets northwest. The services will be under the supervision of Dr. Benjamin W. Meeks, superintendent of the district.

Addresses upon "The Seven Words from the Cross" will be given by Dr. Raphael H. Miller, the National City Christian Church; Dr. Vernon Norwood Ridgely, the Calvary M. E. Church; the Rev. Philip C. Edwards, Washington Grove M. E. Church; Dr. Edward O. Clark, the Chevy Chase Baptist Church; the Rev. George H. Bennett, Wilson Memorial M. E. Church; the Rev. Willis W. Delaplain, of Seat Pleasant M. E. Church, and Dr. James Shera Montgomery, chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Music will be in charge of Justin Lawrie, director of music in the Foundry Church. He will be assisted by the Foundry chorus and Harlan Randall, with Mabel Linton Williams at the organ.

Three-Hour Program.

Churches of the Southwest section will unite at noon in a three-hour devotional service in Grace Episcopal Church, Ninth and D streets.

Three ministers, representing as many denominations, will assist the Rev. Meade Bolton MacBryde, rector of Grace Church, in presenting meditations on "The Seven Last Words of Christ." These pastors include the Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church; the Rev. C. Carroll Burruss, pastor of Marvin M. E. Church, and the Rev. Len F. Stevens, pastor of Kendall Baptist Church.

A combined choir formed from the choirs of each of these churches will sing.

All religious denominations have been invited to take part in the third annual Good Friday services sponsored by the Washington Catholic Evidence Guild, from 2:30 to 3:30 p. m. The services will be held in Franklin Park, Fourteenth and I streets northwest.

Four speakers will be on the program, the Rev. Charles A. Hart, D. D., director of the guild, who is a member of the Catholic University faculty, announced yesterday. They are the Rev. William H. Russell, D. D., of the department of religion of the university; the Rev. Mark Kennedy, O. F. M., of the Franciscan Monastery; the Rev. James McCarl, S. J., of Georgetown University, and the Rev. John McLarney, of the Dominican House of Studies.

The exercises will open the third outdoor season of the Washington Guild, during which 30 trained speakers are scheduled to talk and conduct open forums on each Sunday and on other evenings of the spring and summer months.

Mount Vernon M. E. Church will observe Good Friday with special services in the church tonight. At services at 8 p. m. the Rev. W. Angie Smith, D. D., pastor, will speak on "The Cross."

Cantata to be Presented.

Good Friday services at Christ's Church, Thirty-first and O streets, Georgetown, will be marked by a presentation by the choir of Dubois' cantata, "The Seven Last Words of Christ." The presentation will be under the direction of Richard T. Bell, choirmaster. The pastor will lead 3-hour devotions beginning at noon.

"The Crucifixation," an Easter cantata by Sir John Stainer, will be presented at 7:45 p. m. by the choir of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church. The cantata will be sung in the church auditorium. William J. Weber, director of church music, will have charge of the presentation, which will be public.

A service in French will be held in the Lincoln Chapel of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church at 5 p. m. this afternoon when "Le Recit de la Passion" will be given under the leadership of the Rev. Andre Frank Liotard.

Vatican Priests Bathe Altar For Good Friday Ceremonies

Central Stone in St. Peter's Basilica Laved With Wine and Water.

By the Associated Press.

Vatican City, April 18.—A solemn procession of priests passed before the central altar of St. Peter's Basilica this evening to bathe the altar stone in preparation for tomorrow's anniversary of Christ's passion and death.

The ablutions were of wine and water which symbolized the blood and water that flowed from Christ's side as He hung on the cross.

Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state and high priest of the basilica, conducted the ceremonies with the assistance of the priests.

At sundown these canons carried eight chalices, seven of crystal and one of gilded metal, into the cathedral. They passed around the altar, which was bared of all coverings and ornaments, and poured wine and water on the altar stone. Then each performed the purification with the "aspegillum."

The liquid was then wiped from the altar stone with sponges and the procession moved to the center of the nave, where a blessing was imparted with the use of reputed portions of the cross, the lance with which the centurion pierced the Savior's side and the veil of Veronica.

This morning the Holy Eucharest was removed from the altar and carried in procession to an altar of repose as part of Holy Thursday ceremonies featured by a lengthy sermon on the passion and death of Christ.

The grand penitentiary tapped each confessor on the head with a long wand in commemoration of the penance which in olden times was done in public.

After a brief period of ringing the "Gloria in Excelsis" this morning the bells of Rome's 400 churches were muted. They will remain so over Good Friday to ring out again at noon Holy Saturday to prepare the faithful for the resurrection.

Staff of Clipper Checks on Flight

Hawaiians Greet Fliers With Hero Fervor.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, April 18.—The crew of the Pan-American clipper, heroes of the islands since their record-smashing first commercial flight between California and Hawaii, started today a 48-hour job of checking, segregating and analyzing data gathered on the trip.

Well rested from the 2,400-mile, trail-blazing venture, completed yesterday, the fliers collaborated with executives of Pan-American Airways to get a complete record down on paper for use when they push westward this summer to establish commercial service all the way across the Pacific.

Pan-American officials said the plane would spend at least a week in Hawaii, probably making a series of flights over the various islands of the territory to become acquainted with local conditions.

The next major flight will be a return trip to California, after the inter-island hops.

Great Britain Cool To Works Program

Lloyd George Outlines New Deal to Cabinet.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 18.—David Lloyd George laid his "New Deal" for Britain before the British government today, but observers saw small prospect that his vast public works program, the heart of his scheme, would be adopted.

A special cabinet committee listened for two hours while the white-maned little "Welsh Wizard" explained his far-reaching plans to hasten the return of prosperity in the land.

Emerging, he seemed cheerful. He refused to discuss what took place at the meeting, however.

After several further sessions the cabinet committee will draw up conclusions concerning the war-time premier's proposals for submission to the whole cabinet.

Theater Man Denies Brother Was Suicidal

Reports Louis Notes, 49, left his home in the 1900 block of Kenyon street northwest with intentions of committing suicide were described as unfounded yesterday by his brother, Isaac Notes, manager of the Strand Theater.

Mrs. Gertrude Notes, wife of the missing man, told police he telephoned her several weeks ago, threatening suicide, and she has not seen him since. The brother, however, said he had been in correspondence with Louis, but refused to divulge his whereabouts.

Instructor Fined $300 In Auto Permit Fraud

Accused of obtaining an automobile driver's permit for a colored garage worker who can neither read nor write, Paul L. Tomardy, a driving instructor, of the 1100 block of Fourth street northwest, was sentenced to pay a $300 fine or serve 180 days in jail by Traffic Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday.

The garage worker, William T. Manley, of the 800 block of Twenty-fourth street northwest, codefendant with Tomardy on charges of obtaining a permit by misrepresentation, was fined $25, with an alternative of 25 days in jail. Manley testified the instructor offered to obtain the permit and was paid $8 as a fee.

McAlister Ouster Defeated.

Nashville, Tenn., April 18 (AP).—While two members passed the lie and had to be restrained from coming to blows, the Tennessee House of Representatives today snuffed out a one-man move to impeach Gov. Hill McAlister. The vote against an impeachment resolution by Representative R. E. Little was 90 to 1, Little alone voting for it.

Year or so ago, when world championship was in the offing and Maxie was bursting into bloom as a movie star, he said, "I'm better than Mae West now, because she's a movie fad, and I'll stay." Further he explained, "If I wasn't already on the way to become champion fighter, I think I'd give it up and study singing. I'd rather be an opera singer than anything in the world."

Radio Easter services begin with several special programs. Best of these is a "command performance" of Brahms' "Requiem" on WMAL, at 1:00 a. m., performed by the N. B. C. Symphony Orchestra and a chorus of 200 voices directed by Dr. T. Tertius Noble, of St. Thomas' Church in New York.

Cities Service Concert gives you Wagner's "Pilgrim Chorus" and other appropriate religious numbers, WRC, 8:00 p. m.

Phil Baker's spot will give way to the annual performance of the cantata "Seven Last Words of Christ," WMAL, 9:30 p. m.

The Paulist Choristers present a special Good Friday service, WMAL, 11:15 p. m. Guest speaker is the Very Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, heard on Sunday Catholic Hour broadcasts.

Columbia brings another of its colorful international broadcasts, when at 2 p. m., WJSV, you hear a description of the Holy Week processions in Seville, Spain. Members of the various holy brotherhoods will march from church to to church carrying their jewel-incrusted sacred images.

The Instrumentalist put on a premiere of a new composition by Raymond Scott, "Fifty-fifth Street Rag." Scott, feeling that other Gotham streets had received too much musical publicity, has dedicated his efforts to Fifty-fifth and plays the piano part on the program. Themes are as follows: "In the Studio: The Hero Desires to Go Home," "The Hero Hails a Madison Avenue Bus," "The Bus Stalls at Fifty-fifth Street (Un Poco Vibrato)," "The Hero Walks and Arrives Safely," leading into the main theme, "Hail, Fifty-fifth Street!"

Perhaps the hero should have taken a subway.

Somebody better keep an eye on the C. B. S. publicity writer who takes care of the Stoopnagle and Budd releases. One comes in Spanish today, another in German, all other releases are punctuated with "But Stoopnagle and Budd Poithboinders—They're Peachy!" Tune in tonight, WJSV, 10:35 p. m.

Other high-spots:

Bea Lillie with more fabulous fables, WMAL, 9 p. m.

March of Time, WJSV, 9 p. m.

Ann Harding and Herbert Marshall guesting at Hollywood Hotel," WJSV, 9:30 p. m.

Boston Athletic Association Marathon described by Graham McNamee, and an interview with the winner, WMAL, 2:15 p. m.

Jimmie Foxx, Philadelphia Athletics' catcher, is heard on College Prom, WMAL, 8:30 p. m.
